Holstein Breeders Return To Convention Roots

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — Looking back where it all started, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association converged on Westmoreland County this week to remember past events, study present trends, and anticipate future challenges.

The event was a return to the same location where the first Pennsylvania Holstein Convention was held more than 40 years ago. Quoting from the 1955 program, "Another milestone in the history of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association will be reached when Holstein breeders from the Keystone State convene for their state convention in Greensburg. This will be the association's first state convention and will replace the business meeting usually held during Farm Show week.

"Host for the two-day affair are breeders from southwestern Pennsylvania, Robert Rumbler and John Cooper, director of extension, for the Holstein Fresian Association of America will be on the program. At 7:30 p.m., a colored movie of the national convention will be shown, and at 8:30 p.m. dancing will begin in the spacious Redwood Room of the Mt. View Hotel. There will be no charge for the dance and social hour Thursday night."

In the December issue of the same year, The Pennsylvania Holstein reported on the first Pensylvania convention and a photo showed "Eager, hungry folks as far as the eye can see during the convention banquet at noon." The reprinted report from this first convention can be found beside this report.

Dairy Industry Inundated With Issues

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The current environment of the dairy industry has been described as both "chaotic" and "uncertain" by several dairy industry pundits.

Others have said that it is more confusing and complex than ever before, and it was never easy to understand.

Currently on the table before dairy farmers and their representatives, as well as dairy processors, are at least five different issues, all related to the price of milk.

Those five issues include:

- A proposal by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman for restructuring the federal order milk marketing system;
- Possibly establishing an emergency temporary floor price of $13.50 for Class I and II [illegible] tinues to kick in; and
- Expansion of the temporary Northeast Dairy Compact;
- How to deal with the changing structure and alliances among dairy cooperatives and private dairy businesses as globalization and expanded world trade con-
- What to do should a federal court decision to eliminate Class I differentials be upheld.

There have been and are different sources of information about the proposed federal order milk

New Master Farmers Named

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – For more than 60 years, some of best farmers in the Northeast have been named in the Master Farmer Program. The Program is run by Pennsylvania Farmer magazine and the cooperative extension in Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, and West Virginia.

With this year's class only 563 men and women have been named Master Farmers since 1927. Joining this distinctive group are:

- Roy Crow from Kennedyville, Md. This young Kent County dairyman proves once again that young people can make it in the dairy business with uncommon cow sense, hard work and smart money management. Yet, he still finds time for community service and supporting ag organizations.
- William K. Jackson and Kerry Harvey of New Salem, Pa. These brothers-in-law are carrying their family dairy operation into the next generation with aggressive consumer marketing of value-added product in western Pennsylvania's Fayette County.
- John and Judith Ligo of Grove City, Pa. This couple built a well-managed and profitable dairy operation in Mercer County, all while having major leadership commitments to ag and dairy organizations.
- Keith and Helen Masser from Sacramento, Pa. They've grown their family potato-raising business into a $10 million regional namebrand with $10 million in fresh potato sales from their Schuylkill County head quarters. Both are key leaders in the potato industry.
- Samuel and Beverly Minor of Washington, Pa. This couple has mastered the art of marketing dairy, produce and good food to the suburban fringe of west-

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat bids closed mixed for the day; corn and soybean bids were mostly higher. Wheat mixed. Corn 1 to 3 cents higher. Sorghum 5 to 8 cents higher. Soybeans steady to 4 cents higher. Some overnight export sales to South Korea offered some support as well as forecasts calling for cold weather moving into the Great Plains and Midwest areas this week. Spring wheat areas of the Northern Plains of the U.S. are expecting some much needed moisture and limited gains. Corn and soybean bids were slightly higher as traders corrected Tuesday's moderate losses. Taiwan bought corn overnight, giving bids a boost and higher soybean bids were a reaction to reports of persistent rain in Brazil that continues to delay soybean harvest. However, a record crop is expected in Brazil.

USDA-OK Dept Ag Market News
Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary

Compared to last week: Feeder steers and heifers 3.00-4.00 lower. Demand moderate for feeders. Stocker cattle and calves firm with good good demand. Quality of supply attractive to mainly average. Weigh-ups gaunt to mostly average. Feeder cattle in medium to moderate wheat flesh. Stockers and calves medium to thin fleshed. CME cattle futures were down hard Monday and too many slaughter cattle continue to plug the supply lines as winter feeding weather has been superb. With the aforementioned difficult news digested the cash feeder cattle market managed to stabilize once prices neared hedgable levels for the summer months. Slaughter cows and bulls steady. Packer demand moderate. Demand very good for cows returning to the country. 1300 cows and bulls sold with 25 percent to packers. Special stock cow sale accounted for 700 of the total. Receipts this week 17,150; last week 8,834; last year 14,736. Supply consisted of 77 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 15 percent calves under 600 lbs; 8 percent cows and bulls. The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MARCH 2-8, 1998

STS. DAVID & CHAD, MARCH 2.

ROUGH MONTH?

March takes its name from Mars, the Roman god of war. The Old Saxon name translates to "rough month," probably for the strong winds. It was later changed to mean "lengthening month," for the increased light of its days, and has also been called "boisterous month," for the winds. In Greece, the first three days of March, the middle three, and the last three are times to avoid water. Evil fairies, called Drimes, are thought to work their magic through the element of water during these times. Put off washing or shampooing. If you must use water, immerse an iron horseshoe in it first, to ward off the evil.

Water, taken in moderation, cannot hurt anybody.

– Mark Twain

TIP OF THE WEEK

COCK-A-LEEKIE SOUP

6 leeks
3 tablespoons butter
6 cups chicken broth
1/4 cup basmati rice
6 pitted prunes (optional)
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

Slice leeks, using just a bit of the green part, and sauté in butter until translucent. Add broth and rice, and simmer at least 30 minutes, or until the rice is cooked tender. If using the prunes, chop them into small bits and add at the end of the cooking time. Season with nutmeg.

Makes 8 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

David and Chad (March 2): sow peas good or bad.

When it thunders in March, it brings sorrow.

Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short.

OPINION

Cost Effective Practices Also Good For Animal Well-Being

Animal agriculture has a sincere interest in providing optimum care and management of the animals that supply the food and fiber for our society. Not only do farmers have a vested interest, they have a heart for animals as well.

According to Glenn N. Slack, executive director of the Livestock Conservation Institute, initiatives are now in place to provide consistency in improved handling practices among industries. Most of these have evolved from quality assurance programs, which typically have a multi-faceted approach. Others have developed separated guidelines for the appropriate handling and care of their particular species group.

While a study of quality assurance education programs by researchers at Penn State concluded that these programs primarily address food safety and carcass quality, the net result is that animal well-being has also been considerably enhanced too.

By far, the largest segment of society genuinely concerned with animal well-being are the farmers and ranchers who are producing these animals. We must not forget, however, that food animal production is a business. As business operators, those same farmers and ranchers are also seeking to decrease the cost of production. The great fact about this cost reducing effort is the results. Good animal husbandry practices result not only in better animal well-being, these practices also lower cost.

We believe America's farmers and ranchers will continue their progressive efforts to provide appropriate animal husbandry practices, and as new methods and technologies are shown to be effective, they will be applied to every day production.

To Report New Hires

In December 1997, amendments to Pennsylvania's Domestic Relations Law went into effect. This brings Pennsylvania in compliance with the Federal Welfare Reform Act of 1997. The law requires creation of a national database to support the enforcement of paternity and child support activities.

All employers are required to file a report with the state within 20 days of the hiring or rehiring of an employee. Farmers are not exempt from this law. The new hire date is defined as the first day services are performed for wages by an individual.

Since farmers are exempt from many taxes and reports contained in the databases, many farm employers may not be aware of these new requirements. Fines for not reporting new hires range from $25 for each employee not reported to $500 for filing false reports. Reports are to mailed to Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, New Hire Reporting Program, P.O. Box 69400, Harrisburg PA 17106. For more information, call the Department of Labor and Industry at 1-888-PA- Hires.

To Celebrate Food Check Out Day

According to the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, February 9 was Food Check Out Day. This marked the day the average American has earned enough money to pay for his or her family's entire 1998 food supply. Last year this date fell on February 10. According to statistics from the United States Department of Agriculture, American families spend on average 10.9 per cent of their disposable income for food.

In comparison to Food Check Out Day, Tax Freedom Day, the day the average American earned enough money to pay their federal, state and local taxes, was May 9 last year, according to the Tax Foundation. Affordable food is a product of our successful food production and distribution system. The per cent of disposable income spent on food has declined over the last 25 years. In 1970, Food Check Out Day would have been 11 days later, February 20.

This speaks well of our nation's increasing standard of living, which would be certainly reduced without the affordable, domestic food supply produced by America's farmers.

To Evaluate Varieties Differently

Deciding which variety to plant this year and in the future will take careful study by the farmer, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent. With the introduction of corn, soybean and alfalfa varieties which are resistant or tolerant to certain insects or herbicides, it has become no easy task to decide which variety to grow.

Once the selection could be based solely on the variety which produced the most. Now consider which produces the most, allows the control of a problem pest, how much the seed costs, cost of the herbicide and insecticide you will need to use and the cost of the herbicide and insecticide you will not have to use due to the new technology.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

DROP EVERYTHING!

March 1, 1998

Background Scripture:
Mark 1:1-20
Devotional Reading:
Acts 10:34-43

The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

Mark begins by saying, in effect, this is how the gospel began. Of course, Mark wrote in Greek, not English, so, instead of "gospel" he uses a Greek word, euangelion. In Latin, the word is evangelium, which in Anglo Saxon was rendered as "god-spell," meaning a story from or about God and was understood as "good" or "glad tidings." In the Revised Standard Version of the Bible euaggelion is rendered as "good news." (You can see how the Greek euangelion was the source of "evangel," "evangelism," and "evangelical.")

The gospel was not the books which Matthew, Mark, Luke and John wrote about Jesus, nor is it even his teachings. Instead, it is the good news that God has acted through Jesus Christ to save us. Grammatically, it is a noun, but actually it is much more a verb for it tells us what God has done and will do through Christ.

Although Jesus preached to great crowds and taught his close band of followers, the gospel was and is essentially a personal invitation. That is one reason that it is good news. This is an invitation that comes not as "to whom it may concern," but to you in all your individuality: "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent, and believe in the gospel" (1:15).

HERE'S A GIFT!

Halford Luccock has written, "Christianity is not primarily a demand. It is first of all, a gift. It does not say first 'Do this' or 'Go there.' It says, 'Here is the gift of Christ in God.' Its first words are not 'Do' or 'Go,' but 'Come' and 'Receive'." What Jesus of Nazareth is offering us in the beginning of Mark's gospel is the greatest possible gift we could ever imagine. That too is why it is such good news.

Accepting the gift requires a response from us: "Repent and believe in the gospel" (1:15). Even the call to "repent" is a gift because it is a way out of our sin and guilt. And that too is good news, for whether or not we acknowledge it, sin and guilt are the two most destructive realities in our lives. I know, there are people who don't believe in sin. They feel it is demeaning and disheartening to think of themselves as sinners. But that is only true if there is no way out — and there is a way out.

Quite contrary to what some of us may think, "Repent" means quite a bit more than penitence. Penitence by itself means only that we are sorry about our sin. (Sorry we're caught in it? Sorry for the consequences it costs us? Sorry it hurts our self-esteem?) Being sorry is not enough. One of the things that keeps some of us in a pattern of sin is the release we think we get from being "sorry." We sin, we're sorry; we go and sin again.

BEYOND 'SORRY'

Mark uses the Greek word metanoia, which, according to The Interpreter's Bible, Vol. VII, means "a complete change of mind, a new direction of will, an altered purpose in life." Being sorry is the beginning of the process, but, unless it calls for some profound changes in our attitude and sends us forth in a different direction, it is not repentance.

The second response we are called to make invitation is "Believe in the gospel." The call of John the Baptist was to repentance, but the challenge of Jesus calls us beyond repentance. The Living Bible renders this as "Turn from your sins and act on this glorious news," while E.V. Rieu (The Four Gospels) translates it as "put your trust in the Good News." Mark is not talking about believing in an idea, but of putting your trust in a promise.

Note how frequently Mark uses the word "immediately" — 41 times in his gospel, nine times in this first chapter. It is characteristic of Mark's compelling style. When Jesus calls Simon, Andrew, James and John, all four immediately leave their nets and follow Jesus. The call of Christ to them and to us is an urgent one. It is so imperative that, instead of tucking it into our calendar at some convenient place, we need to drop everything and respond — immediately!

Let your profits go up with smoke!

Charolais-sired Smokies Increase Profit.

Market reports prove Charolais-sired Smokies consistently top the market. More pounds and a premium price paid per hundred weight increases profit for the commercial cow-calf producer. Charolais-cross Smokies enter the feedlot sooner and realize heavier and more efficient gains. This results in earlier marketing and added profits for producers.

As documented by the American-International Charolais Association (AICA) Beef-Charolais program, Charolais-sired cattle return more profit from the feedlot. The average added value returned on this program has been $8.36 per head with premiums paid as high as $43.97 per head. Contact the AICA for information about the breed, commercial-focus programs, and local bull sale dates.

New Master Farmers Named

William K. Jackson And Kerry Harvey

William K. Jackson and Kerry Harvey stand ready to grasp opportunity and adapt to what the market wants.

That willingness has led them to add value to their dairy product by manufacturing super-premium ice cream and opening a convenience store to draw customers to buy their milk and other products.

Jackson Farms, New Salem, Pa., is a three-way partnership between William S. Jackson (Master Farmer Class of '71), son William K. Jackson, and son-in-law Kerry Harvey. This business arrangement began in 1985, when they began making and marketing ice cream.

In 1986, they built a convenience store, including gas pumps. It lies along busy State Route 40 between Uniontown and Washington in southwest Pennsylvania.

The elder Jackson oversees crop management. Bill a Penn State ag business graduate, manages the dairy herd, replacements and recordkeeping, Kerry, a former elementary school teacher, handles plant operations and wholesaling, Kerry's wife, Linda, also a former teacher, manages the store.

The farming operation consists of 790 owned acres, including 500 crop, 150 pasture and 50 woodland acres.

They milk about 170 registered Holsteins, averaging more than 20,000 pounds. Of their 3.3 million pounds produced annually, one-third is marketed through MidAmerica Dairy Cooperative, one-third is wholesaled to other stores, and one-third is sold in their store.

The partners employ one person full-time in the plant, two full-time people on the farm, three or four full-timers in the store, and about eight part-time in the store. Kerry's son Derek splits his time between the plant and farm. Store hours are 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

A name in ice cream. Kerry started manufacturing ice cream when he entered the business in 1985. He makes a super-premium (translation: high fat) brand to rival the taste of Ben & Kerry's.

"We live on our product," Kerry reasons. "If our product's not any good, we're not gonna have any customers."

Adapting to change. "This business expanded and grew because they adapted and were willing to change," Kerry notes of the Jacksons.

He and Bill acknowledge the solid foundation set by William S. and his brother Robert, who were partners until 1985. This generation continues their tradition of low debt and reinvesting profits.

Capital improvement generally are paid out of operating expenses. They borrow very little money.

"Most changes we have made seem to result from opportunities that come along, sometimes unexpectedly," they note. "For instance, neighboring farms have come up for sale, and although we may not have planned to buy additional land, we couldn't pass on an opportunity."

The family recently built a 1,4000-square-foot addition to the store. New kitchen and seating areas will allow them to expand their lunch business, which has been growing. "You have to serve the public what they want," Kerry says.

Any expansion will probably come at the retail or wholesale end of the business. That's a possibility if any of their children decide to stay on the farm. They've talked about adding a restaurant or even a car wash.

Kerry and Linda have four sons: Jason, who attends college and works on the farm Derek, who works full-time on the farm; and Ryan and Joshua, both still in school. Bill and wife Janice, a speech therapist, have three daughters; Joni in college, and Jill and Jenna, both in high school. They also help out in the store.

Serving the community. The partners sport a long list of activities off the farm. Bill has been vice president and secretary of the Pennsylvania DHIA state board. He is president of the county fair board and has served as president of the county extension board. He won the state DHIA Clyde Robinson Award in 1996.

Kerry is a member of state DHIA. Holstein Association, MidAmerica Dairy Cooperative, Genex and Pennsylvania Milk Juggers Association.

Sam And Beverly Minor

Profitable dairying at Sam and Beverly Minor's Springhouse farm and market depends on their knack for niche marketing. With dairy margins shrinking, the Washington, Pa., couple emphasizes the food service, entertainment and vegetable segments of their business.

The Springhouse restaurant and market is open 361 days a year from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily, except for opening at noon on Sundays. The operation consists of their own milk and dairy products, a bakery, fresh produce in season, deli, buffet-style restaurant and catering.

Special events, hosted every month are increasing important. They also do spring and fall educational tours for 3,000 to 4,000 school children. Their outdoor Picnic Patch has handled parties of up to 350. A dream for the future is a Banquet Barn.

The farm's two milking herds, totaling 110 cows average more than 19,000 pounds milk. One produces milk for the retail market; the second sells through National Farmers Union. Depending on what happens with Federal Orders and milk pricing, they will look into merging them.

They own 135 acres of cropland, 110 acres of pasture, 145 acres of woodland, plus the 14-acre homestead and retail market area.

Including family, Minors have 61 full- and part-time employees in the retail market and four employees on the farm. Keeping and motivating good, long-time employees has been a real asset.

Following a dream Beverly is a Penn State graduate in commercial consumer services. Sam holds a Penn State ag economics degree.

In 1972, after 10 years in the artificial breeding industry, they decided to develop their own small farm and retail market in southwestern Pennsylvania, where both had grown up on farms. Beverly is a third-generation Master Farmer, following in the footsteps of her grandfather and father, Roy and Clyde Robison.

Sam cites critical advice garnered from one successful retail marketer. First, the man told him, location is everything. Second, he advised: "Turn your wife loose, and you look after the books."

In 1973, they bought the farm along Route 136 west of Eighty Four. Milking and retailing began in 1975.

Growth in food retail. With a more than 50% margin on food and only 27% margin in milk at that time, the choice to concentrate more on food became obvious. The bakery is the fastest-growing segment of their business.

A family effort. Sam and Beverly credit their children, now all married and ranging in age from 34 to 28, with helping make them successful. Their eldest, Marcia Opp, manages the store. The youngest. Sam, manages the farm operation, including 90 acres of intensively grazed pasture, 168 acres dedicated to hay and hay balage, and 25 acres of market vegetables.

A third child, Jill Miles, returned home in 1995 to open The Springhouse Learning Station, a Christian-based preschool and day care center about five miles from the farm. Daughters Tee Kelly and Jody Englehardt live in Maryland and Virginia, respectively. But both maintain a strong interest in the farm.

Nephew Michael Lush oversees nutrition and breeding of both dairy herds.

Giving back. Minors say their relationships with extension and ag organizations were vital to getting them started. In gratitude, they feel compelled to now give back to the industry.

Long active with the state Dairy Princess Program and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program board, Beverly now serves on the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders Board and chairs the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board.

Sam is on Agway's Executive and Planning Committee, the Penn West Farm Credit board, and USDA's National Ag Research Extension Education and Economic Advisory Board; plus, he chairs the National Council on Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching.

They are also members of Grace United Methodist Church.

ern Pittsburgh. Yet both find time to serve key ag leader roles.

•Ronald Widmyer of Charles Town, W. Va. His enterprising nature and engineering skills replaced this Jefferson County farm's dairy enterprise with a productive aquaculture venture that markets fresh and value-added trout products. He's a strong advocate for streamlining regulatory controls on aquaculture.

Keith And Helen Masser

Keith and Helen Masser of Sacramento, Pa., stress marketing and teamwork in their farming and potato distribution business. That teamwork extends to each other, fellow potato growers and customers.

Sterman Masser Inc., named for Keith's dad, started out in 1970 as a three-way sub-S corporation. Keith, Sterman and Keith's deceased younger brothers were partners.

Following the brother's drowning in 1980, Sterman turned to running a coal business. Keith, a Penn State ag engineering graduate, has been corporation president and general manager of the Schuylkill County operation since.

Helen, who holds a Penn State degree in biological health and nutrition, is secretary/treasurer and accounting manager. She is a second-generation Master Farmer, following in the footsteps of father George Tallman of Tower City.

Today, Massers own 1,100 acres and rent another 1,500. Their "bread and butter" is 450 acres of potatoes, which yielded about 300 cwt. last season; they also grow grain. The corporation employs about 65 people, including eight managers.

Massers sell 1,500 trailer loads per year. Of those, they grow 300 themselves and 300

John and Judy Ligo

John and Judy Ligo feel no burning desire to milk cows. "It was a financial decision," stresses John.

For these Grove City, Pa., farmers, the decision to begin dairying in 1990 boiled down to milking more profit from crops on their western Pennsylvania farm.

Ligos currently milk 225 grade Holsteins three times, averaging 24,277 pounds milk, 873 pounds fat and 812 pounds protein. They ship 4.5 million pounds of milk annually to Dean Foods.

They milk in a new double-10 parallel parlor attached to a new 212-cow freestall barn. The couple added a second, 490-acre farm about six miles away in 1991.

LiTerra employs five people full-time year-round, and two others part-time. John oversees the operation.

Besides working full-time for Telmark, Judy raises calves to breeding age, grooms the farmstead to keep up its "Dairy of Distinction" designation, acts as "sounding board' on decisions, and helps determine long-term goals.

In addition to milking cows, they grow 230 acres of mixed alfalfa-orchardgrass hay for silage; 170 acres of corn for grain and 160 acres of silage corn. Per-acre yields average 16 tons of haylage; 104 bushels of corn; and 19.5 tons of corn silage. They also have a small "hobby herd" of Scottish Highland cattle.

Bucking conventional wisdom. Ligos rejected the "lease-in" philosophy of starting a dairy business. Instead of renting facilities and land and gradually building capital, they borrowed heavily to build an integrated facility up front.

Their understanding of finances and contacts proved invaluable. Ligos wrote an aggressive business plan detailing what they wanted to do and how it would pay.

Keys to make money with milk. John cites four things needed to make money dairying; labor, management, capital and advanced technology. "Dairy farming takes all four of those. If you can get really well."

Financial management is their strong point, John says, he constantly runs cash flows and financial statements to gauge their financial position. Among goals outlined in their mission statement are "to maximize profitability without further capital expansion" and "to remain competitive with the top 10% of dairies nationwide."

John uses DTN to monitor weather, commodity markets and other news and ag information. DHIA test data is downloaded via e-mail. He also maintains a futures account to allow hedging of purchased inputs

LiTerra uses BST to increase feed efficiency and persistence of lactation Heifers freshen at 22 months of age. Target breeding limits heat detection and insemination to four days every two weeks.

Extending calving interval to 16 months reduced cull rate per year, reduced number of replacements on feed, and increased percent cow days in milk. Ligos group all first-lactation animals separately, which seems to cut stress and improve overall production.

A portion of LiTerra's milk quality bonus goes into a fund employees can spend any way they wish. All employees are paid hourly, with a group health plan and savings plan available

Off the farm. John currently serves as secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Board, chairman of the Agway Zone Committee and vice president of the Mercer County Ag Land Preservation Board. He is also a member of Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders.

Judy serves on the Mercer County Ag Development Board and PennNorthwest Economic Development Board.

Holstein Breeders Return To Convention Roots

The 1998 convention opened Wednesday with a number of seminars related to the business of the dairy farmer. For example, a panel of dairy farmers discussed their experiences in diversifying rather than expanding their present dairy herds. Members of this panel are:

Dave Bitler, Fleetwood, who, along with his family, milks 100 cows, farms 500 acres, has a 25,000lb. herd average, and a BAA of 107. They raise all bull calves. The high pedigreed bulls are sold for herd sires. The side-line business has evolved for freezer beef, and they organize tours, one to the World Dairy Expo.

Vernon Seip, Lansdale, who, along with his large family, milk 100 cows, operate a dairy retail store, and miniature golf course. In more recent years, a sit-down ice cream parlor, a petting zoo, and a driving range and batting cage have been added. October Fall Fest features pick your own pumpkins and child-oriented activities such as school tours.

Dan Ulmer, Bellefonte, who, with his family, milks 100 cows, sells a few top quality bulls to breeding studs and has done some embryo transplants. Recently surrounding farms have become available to rent at a reasonable rate for farming. This year they plan to farm 850 acres with grain as the new cash crop. Along the way, a vegetable retail outlet at the farm for the nearby townspeople has been developed. The produce from 10 acres of sweet corn, one acre of strawberries, one acre of pumpkins, and some other vegetables in season. In addition, Dan sells seed corn.

The purpose of this seminar was to get a feel for why these farmers decided to diversify rather than expand their herds. The farmers added special insight to the discussion.

Some of the points in the discussion are:

• You need to look at your resources and what you like to do. Most farmers like to farm, some also like to meet people, some do not.

Holstein Breeders Return To Convention Roots

• When your first love is farming, and you live in a very urban area, the real estate values are incredibly high. The number of acres available to handle a larger herd are not available.

• A 100 cow herd can't support several families, so if you want to keep on farming, you need to look for other ways to make a profit.

• They didn't sell the land at home and move the farming operation to a less dense populated area because you can only do this one time, and then you are done. In addition, family ties keep you on your home place.

• Additional skills are needed if you are going to diversify. People skills were mentioned. Also business skills such as selling may be needed.

• Family partnerships are a blessing when everyone gets along reasonably well and can work together.

• Good hired labor is appreciated by everyone. Sometimes a teenager is given an opportunity to have a first job. Sometimes a mature person is given special consideration because this person has become an integral part of the business.

• Don't have a hobby you can't make a profit from. Many diversifications come from a hobby turned into a business.

• Management takes resources and moves them toward a desired end. The moderator, Gary Shepherd, Westmoreland County agent, said all the panel members had expressed exactly this definition for good management—what management is meant to do.

The annual convention sale held Wednesday night was quite lively with many lots selling over $4,000 even as embryos. The top of the sale was lot number two in the catalogue. Solid-Gold Rudolph Lucy-ET, a July calf, sold for $9,500 to H. E. Hendel, Brogue. The high indexed calf consigned by Mike and Cindy Weimer, Emlenton, is out of their famous Lacey cow. The calf's sire is Rudolph, and the bottom side has exceptional dams on back to at least the 7th generation.

The second high lot was a first-choice-of-four ultrasound females due 8/30/98 consigned by Dale and Fred Rice from Chambersburg. Looking Ahead Group from Harmony paid $7,800 for this choice. Metro is the sire, and the maternal line is the famous homebred Kaye and Noreen cows that put both longevity and indices into the pedigree.

The third high selling lot at $7,000 was also bought by H. E. Hendel. Fay-West Patron Libby-Et, a May heifer, was consigned by Fay-West Holsteins, owned by the Derr family from Dawson. The sire is patron, and the dam is Rothrock Leadman Leopard-Et, the next dam Lupy, and the next day Lou Ella. Need we say more?

In the awards program, Gary and Barbara Lentz from Lebanon were named the winners of the 1998 distinguished young breeder award. They have three children, Katie, Dustin, and Colin.

Their farm and Holstein herd, Dream-On Holsteins was established in 1980 with 40 registered Holsteins that averaged 17,091m, 663f with a BAA of 102.1 on a rented farm where feed was purchased.

Today, they own 85 head of registered Holsteins with a rolling herd average of 26,304m 884f 847p with a BAA of 106.8. They have purchased a farm, built a new tie-stall barn and heifer facility.

They have been active in Lebanon County Holstein Club where Gary has served as president and treasurer. He has also served as a national Holstein delegate and chaired the county heifer sale. The family has hosted over 300 club members at the 1995 county field day. Gary is also active on the county extension committee, serves as a 4-H leader and on his church board.

Barb has been active with the Lebanon County dairy promotion committee, serves as a Sunday School teacher, is treasurer of the parent-teacher organization and is the church youth coordinator.

Dream-On Holsteins has been very active in dairy promotion, hosting numerous school tours at the farm and has hosted a Farm-City open house. The Lentz family has received the progressive breed-

As American People Change So Do Market Opportunities

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — By 2030, there will be no white majority in California, according to experts speaking at the recent Pennsylvania/Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference and Trade Show held at the Willow Valley Resort and Conference Center, located south of Lancaster city.

According to Dr. John Lord, with St. Joseph University in Philadelphia, not only will there be no white majority in California, there won't be any majority.

Speaking to the more than 400 people attending the conference from Pennsylvania and surrounding states, the populations of people with Hispanic, Asian and European cultural backgrounds will be about equal.

By 2050, something similar is projected for the entire United States.

Dr. Lord's point in talking about projected population demographics is that those preparing to feed tomorrow's population have to get started today.

He said that ethinic diversity is growing in the United States, but the description of America as a melting pot is no longer adequate.

That was true before, he said, as people left their nations to emmigrate to America for freedoms and opportunities, and wanted to assimilate, today that has changed.

He said America can better be described as a "salad," a mix of different cultures, rather than one generic nation-wide culture.

Therefore, there will be a growing need for niche agricultural productions and marketing opportunities.

Further, the population is changing.

America has a strange dual population swells — a baby boom from the baby boomers, and the large population of aging baby boomers.

Combined with the lack of food preparation time in the home, and the lack of food preparation knowledge, marketing and providing food for the consumer is a different game.

Add to that the fact that most families — many single parent, and many two-wage earners — don't have time to cook at home if they wanted to, the food delivery industry has to change.

And it has already.

What that means for the direct marketer is that there are many opportunities to produce and market specialty items, and also for marketing combinations that reduce decision-making for customers.

He said that Americans don't want to have to make more decisions, they want to make fewer, and they don't have time to prepare foods, about 15 to 20 minutes.

Change is already happening in retail food stores, as the outside aisles are the primary areas of new marketing and product introductions, while the interior of the aisles remain the location for staples, ingredients and more common foods.

He said that just as the growth in the restaurant business has been almost entirely in take-out foods, and that some businesses have been working with caterers to provide employees with ready-to-heat and serve meals to take with them at the end of the day, retail stores are starting to look at providing drive-up service.

He said that growing use of computers and electronic communications will enable such a scenario as a ordering groceries and prepared meals from the stores and then driving to the store and having the order ready to pick up.

The apparent common theme to consumer desires is providing convenience and removing as many decisions as possible.

That works well with direct marketing as well.

While a traditional roadside market may offer raw products, the more modern roadside markets are beginning to provide serving size portions for sale, prewashed, precleaned, and in some cases marketing complementary foods together.

Another key is providing information. Sales can be increased just through the use of providing information on the packaging that tells the consumer what the product is, how to cook it, and with what it goes well.

Also speaking Martha Daughdrill, of Newburg Vegetable Farm in Maryland.

With only a 25-acre farm, she said they have been able to be successful by organically growing a variety of high quality vegetables and herbs, picking and selling quickly, not trying to sell sub-quality produce, and by seeking out and developing sales to higher-quality demanding markets, such as restaurants.

According to Dr. Lord, no matter what politicians and self-proclaimed consumer advocates say, Americans aren't afraid to spend money on food. He said they have the money, they are just looking for convenience.

Holstein Breeders Return

Nina Burdette, Mercersburg, had four award winners, and Steve and Chris Wood, Littlestown, had two awards. The list of All-Pennsylvania award winners is published with this report.

Fifty-nine Pennsylvania Holstein Association members were honored with the prestigious progressive breeder registry award. Keystone Farms, Easton, received the award for the 40th time this year, while eight breeders received the award for the first time. The list of winners are published with this report.

First Annual State Convention

Editor's Note: This report was published in The Pennsylvania Holsstein December issue, 1955.

By H.S. Dodge, Editor

Pennsylvania Holstein breeders, their wives and families were treated to the hospitality of the Southwestern Holstein Ass'n. when on November 17-18 they convened for the 1st Annual State Convention. The meeting was held in Greensburg, Penna., at pictuesque Mt. View Hotel, on U.S. Rt. 30.

As a curtain raiser for the convention, a mixer was held the night before in the main ballroom. At this time visiting guests were introduced and the dedication ceremony took place. Shrouded in secrecy until the day of the convention opening was the fact that the convention yearbook had been dedicated to Albert B. Craig, Sewicklty, Penna. Mr. Craig is a longtime breeder in the State of Pennsylvania and is presently the President of The Holstein-Friesian Association of America. The yearbook was released to the crowd as the dedication took place. It was a 44-page brochure containing stories about many of the breeders in the southwestern area. It also listed organized club members of the district by counties as well as all known breeders on record. The book was complied and edited by Boyd Wolff of New Alexandria and being well received, he was highly complimented on his work.

General Chairman, J. Lewis Williams presided over the "Mixer" and following the official duties, turned the room over for round and square dancing. Doughnuts and cider quenched the thirst of the revelers and the night's entertainment was well enjoyed.

The dawn of "convention day" was marked by a chill in the weather but the day was quite bright and cheerful and the crowd came out for the sessions. Past President, Timothy Gehman, gave the invocation at the noon banquet and after the Virginia ham dinner, toastmaster Harvey Shaffer took over. He introduced Director of Extension Service, John Cooper, present from their headquarters at Brattleboro, Vt. Mr. Cooper reviewed the results of the year 1955 and compared them with the last several years. Figures showed that in most all categories, Holstein progress is being maintained in the Nation. Pennsylvania in particular is keeping step and in many of the scoring divisions that mean so much when they add up for 1st, 2nd and 3rd positions in the nation. Pennsylvania will be right in there with her points, doubtless holding second and in some respects, competing for first in the U.S. activity index.

V.A. Huston, Assistant Director, Bureau of Institution Management, presented much revealing information on the work that is being done in the Institution herds of the State and as chairman of the Resolutions committee presented five resolutions which were adopted. (See elsewhere)

Capping off the banquet, the speakers, entertainment, etc., Countess Maria Pulaski presented her act. She provided an amusing and thrilling and certainly a very revealing account of her life and activities as a spy in the counter-espionage service during World War II. (Edt., Note: Possibly one of the most entertaining parts of her presentation was her comment concerning her private conversation with the Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, during dinner.) A delegation from Ohio were guests of the convention and rumor has it that they at once were considering booking the Countess for some of the Ohio meetings coming up.

Field-Secretary, Arthur Nesbitt presented his annual report and a good one it was. (Produced in detail elsewhere) J.O. Canby, Pennsylvania's Director to the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, made the presentations of the PBR plaques and compli-

High selling lot at the convention sale was Solid-Gold Rudolph Lucy-ET. Consigned by Mike ande Cindy Weimer and shown here at the time of the sale, Lucy brought $9,500 from the bid of H. E. Hendel, Brogue. In the box, Horace Backus read pedigrees and Dave Rama was the auctioneer. Adam Derr Jr. is at the halter, Don Welk and Thad Sturgeon can be seen taking bids.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — More and more of the same — change.

Overall, that was the message from a variety of speakers at the 17th annual CoreStates Bank agri-education seminar held Thursday at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

CoreStates, a leading lender in the region, is to merge with First Union Bank of North Carolina in April, but is to retain its commitment to serving the agricultural sector, according to Darvon Boyd, director of CoreStates' Agri-Finance Department.

About 470 people attended the Thursday event, which had the theme, "Taking Charge of Change."

Speakers included three agricultural economists — H. Louis Moore, Penn State University professor; Dr. Barry Flinchbaugh, Kansas State University; and David Kohl, Virgnia Tech Polytechnic Institute.

Other speakers included Lynn Henderson, president of Doane Agricultural Services Company; Kate Coler, federal legislative representative for agricultural banking issues with the American Bankers Association in Washington, D.C.; Dr. Charles Hosler, Penn State professor emeritus of metereology; and Richard Pottorff, a chief economist and director of economic services with Doane.

Speakers representing CoreStates included Lawrence Delp, president of CoreStates Keystone Market, F. Barry Shaw, chairman of the CoreStates Agri-Finance board of directors, and Joseph Del Tito, executive vice president and senior credit officer with CoreStates Keystone Market.

The event also included presentations by Gerald Boyd, the 1997 Lancaster County superior achievement winner, who spoke on 4-H opportunities for preparing youth to be able to set and accomplish goals for themselves and for their community; and Kendra Weaver, Lancaster Country FFA vice president, and county poultry ambassador, who talked about the FFA, and how the next generation is preparing to take over family farming and how the definition of the family farm is changing.

Henderson, president of Doane, provided his list of "The 10 Megatrends of Agriculture."

Doane is an Ohio-based information and consulting business, founded in 1919, that is known for its newsletters and publications.

Henderson said that since accepting the assignment of preparing for the talk, he did a lot of research.

After several conferences with Doane economists, reviews of research, visiting with USDA and other policy makers, as well as executives and leading agricultural leaders, he said he arrived at what he considers the 10 things that are shaping United States agriculture.

Henderson listed the trends.

The number one trend to affect agriculture he said is that the world will continue to need what the United States produces.

He said the reasons are fairly clear: there are 90 million more people every year who need to eat; diets worldwide are improving and higher nutritional demands increases overall demand for agricultural production; education levels are increasing, meaning that nutritional knowledge is increasing and thus demand for higher-valued commodities will continue; and intense global competition to provide those foods to those markets will keep prices down and more available to consumers.

He said more of the world is moving away from coarse grains to foods with higher caloric intakes.

The number two trend, he said is that farming is to be a riskier venture than ever before.

He said that the Freedom to Farm Act allows for more uncertainty in production. Farmers' ability to make last minute decisions on what crops and where to plant changes the current ability for as accurate production estimates to be made.

He also said that farm program payments are disappearing, and shallow pockets coupled with tight profit margins can mean disaster more quickly than ever before in an bad-season.

That is added to by volatile markets, which can be dramatically affected by production levels, consumer beliefs, and changing information.

He said that agricultural price fluctuations are about twice that experience by Wall Street traders. He said that a 3-percent change on Wall Street is considered very significant. At the same time a 7-percent change in agricultural prices is common.

He said he projects fluctuations in agricultural prices to only increase.

The third trend identified was that fewer and fewer producers will find that they don't have to do everything by themselves anymore.

He said that the current information explosion will be able to provide farmers with more ideas of how they can better compete, and new professions are emerging that will be able to provide help.

Henderson said he surveyed some farmers about their use of advisors. The results showed that while 40 percent said they used market advisors, 44 percent said they will be using them in the future.

He said that 24 percent said they use crop consulting services and 30 percent indicated they would be using those services in the future.

Similarly, while 15 percent use financial analysis now, 21 percent said they would in the future.

The fourth trend was to get away from having to own everything — land, equipment, etc.

He said the high cost of accumulating equity through farming doesn't make sense for some with such riskiness in business.

Ownership is not necessary, he said, and showed a map that indicated vast areas of agricultural production land that is either rented or leased.

He said 40 percent of United States farmland is non-operator owned, and he said he would not be surprised if the real amount of land owned by a non-farm operator was more than 50 percent.

He said continued and expanded alliances and cooperative ventures are expected under this trend.

A fifth trend is that profitability will continue to be a function of the size of an operation.

He said that the advantages of economies of scales will continue to drive decisions and operational design.

Increasing regulation will require that in order to produce competitively and to be able to absorb the additional cost of complying with regulatory controls and oversight, farms will have to be bigger.

Henderson said the growth in the size of farming operations, and a decrease in the number of operations, has been a continuing trend for that and other reasons.

He said that in 1980, there were about 700,000 hog producers in the nation and that has decreased to come from Idaho The balance are from other regions of the country. Potatoes are marketed to Mid-Atlantic supermarket chains.

Key potato players. Massers play a key role in Pennsylvania's fresh-market potato industry. Massers can repackage potatoes and mix shipments to supply markets even during months when there's no Pennsylvania crop. That way, growers still have a market when their new crop comes in.

From the beginning, Keith's emphasis has been marketing. Potato sales have grown from $600,000 in 1976 to $10 million in 1997.

To ensure they can outperform the competition, Massers built a 120-by60-foot refrigerated potato storage so they can inventory potatoes. And they installed state-of-art packaging equipment to pack them fast. A nine-truck fleet of tractor-trailers moves them out for guaranteed delivery.

Adopting new technology. "We seek out technology that's out there, and we apply it early on," Keith explains.

Keith was one of the first in the state to install center pivot irrigation. They also use a variable-rate sprayer that adjusts to the ground speed of the tractor. They bought two new combines with yield monitors last year.

Trucks are replaced as they go out of warranty. Dependability is a must for deliveries, Keith reasons.

Air harvesters also improve quality by separating rocks and alleviating bruising. A computerized potato planter allows them to adjust spacing and easily vary fertilizer rates.

Helen has kept accounting records on computer since the early '80s. Six office computers are currently networked.

Construction will begin this spring on a$3 million building and potato packaging machinery expansion that will handle projected production 10 years from now. The new packing house should be in operation by May 1999.

A large land base. Massers' operation has grown to more than 2,600 acres owned and rented. Besides potatoes, they raise 920 acres of corn, 250 acres of soybeans, 400 acres of wheat, and 50 acres of oats and rye.

Their three-year rotation is part of an Integrated Pest Management program to help combat Colorado potato beetle. It includes potatoes, cover-crop rye, no-till corn, no-till wheat and cover-crop sorghum-sudangrass to reduce soil erosion and disease.

Beyond the farm. Helen currently serves as vice president of the National Potato Promotion Board, and vice chairman of its Research and Evaluation Committee. Keith is past president.

Keith is currently president of Pennsylvania Cooperative Potato Growers, Schuylkill County Farmland Preservation Board, and Susquehanna River Basin Commission Ag Advisory Board.

Their children, David and Julie, attend Penn State.

Ronald L. Widmyer

Ron Widmyer grew up on his parent's dairy farm, then left for Carneigie-Mellon University and a mechanical engineering career. But his career in aerospace design and graduate business school took a turn in 1972, due to his parents' health crisis.

The Charles Town, W.Va., farmer returned to Federal Hill Farm to help and learned the business of running the recapitalized dairy. Two years later, Federal Hill Farm was incorporated, allowing his father's retirement and change-over of the business to Ron and brother Todd.

Through the '70s, the dairy operation expanded to milking 145 cows in a 15-stall herringbone parlor. Cropping operations gradually grew into the mid-80s to 1,750 acres of corn,soybeans and wheat, mostly under no-till.

A 100,000-bushel grain storage and drying system was constructed, partly in anticipation of developing an ethanol plant. Widmyer and 20 area farmers founded Shenandoah Ethanol Inc., but disbanded it two years later because the project proved unfeasible..

End of dairy era. Faced with urban encroachment the late '80s, the Windmyers cut back on rental ground and began designing a flow-through tank trout production system to use cold spring water flowing at 1,500 gallons a minute. They designed, built and still market automatic feeders patented by Ron.

Incentive to change greatly accelerated with the sudden death of their herdsman in 1990. Four years later, the herd was dispersed to concentrate on aquaculture.

Ron explains, "Specialized farming that more directly serves consumer interests had more potential. And we were able to find exceptionally skilled people to help."

Today's operation. Of the 850 acres farmed, 585 acres are owned by Federal Hill Inc. and Widmyer its president, the brothers aren't plagued with "new paint fever," but are technology-oriented and very focused on environmentally sound and cost effective practices.

Federal Hill rotates crops, uses at least two different corn herbicide families, went back to conservation tillage and does nitrogen leaf tests on corn.

Cropping corn, soybeans and wheat is Federal Hill Farm's primary operation. Last year's per-acre yield averages were: 90 bushels for (combined irrigated and nonirrigated) corn, 55 bushels for conventional soybeans, 20 bushels for double-cropped beans and 80 bushels for wheat.

The Widmyers and their trout operations manager Marilyn Fauble raise up to 20-ton processed and marketed under the Federal Hill Trout Farm label. The business has one other full-time employee and four part-timers.

Eggs are delivered in 30,000 batches, hatched in their elaborate spring-fed system. Six weeks after hatch, 1 1/2-inch fingerlings are moved to 300-gallon tanks, then to 900-gallon tanks in a flow-through, singe-pass system with a recirculating loop for adult fish.

Fish production is still a secondary enterprise for this operation. To minimize labor, "We built and rely on automated self-feeders," explains Ron.

Fresh market trout go to local restaurants. Some 15% of sales (and rising) are retailed as smoke trout and spread, with the rest sold through grocery chains.

Federal Hill also raises about 60 dairy replacement heifers and finishes about 60 head of dairy-beef steers a year. Ron's primary responsibilities are financial management, crop production and market development; Todd's are market promotion, sales advertising, maintenance and irrigation.

Irrigation "insurance." Underground irrigation pipe and hydrants on 200 acres near the farmstead have a two-fold purpose. A big gun hose cart irrigates water from the fish effluent stream or from the fish waste collection ponds.

"But in the 1991 drought, (the irrigated ground) provided a 70+bushel yield and our only harvested crop," notes Widmyer. Last year's 160-bushel irrigated average raised the whole farm average to 90 bushels.

No business priorities. Ron and wife Lyn have two children, Nick and Molly, both still in grade school. Widmyer hopes to instill in them the importance of education throughout life.

100,000 today.

A sixth trend, he said is the continuing adoption and use of new technology to increase competitiveness, or to break into new fields.

He said crop and livestock production will have continued genetic developments such as the pesticide-resistant soybeans that entered mainstream farming in recent years.

Further, satellite and Internet services and technology, provide opportunities for efficiencies and information. He said that information means profit, if the right information is used.

Being able to filter through the vast amount of information becoming available to find useful information is key to transforming information into profit.

The seventh trend that Henderson said will continue is the growing public demand for environmental and operational controls on agricultural operations, mainly because of urban sprawl. That can be translated to mean increasing regulation, not less.

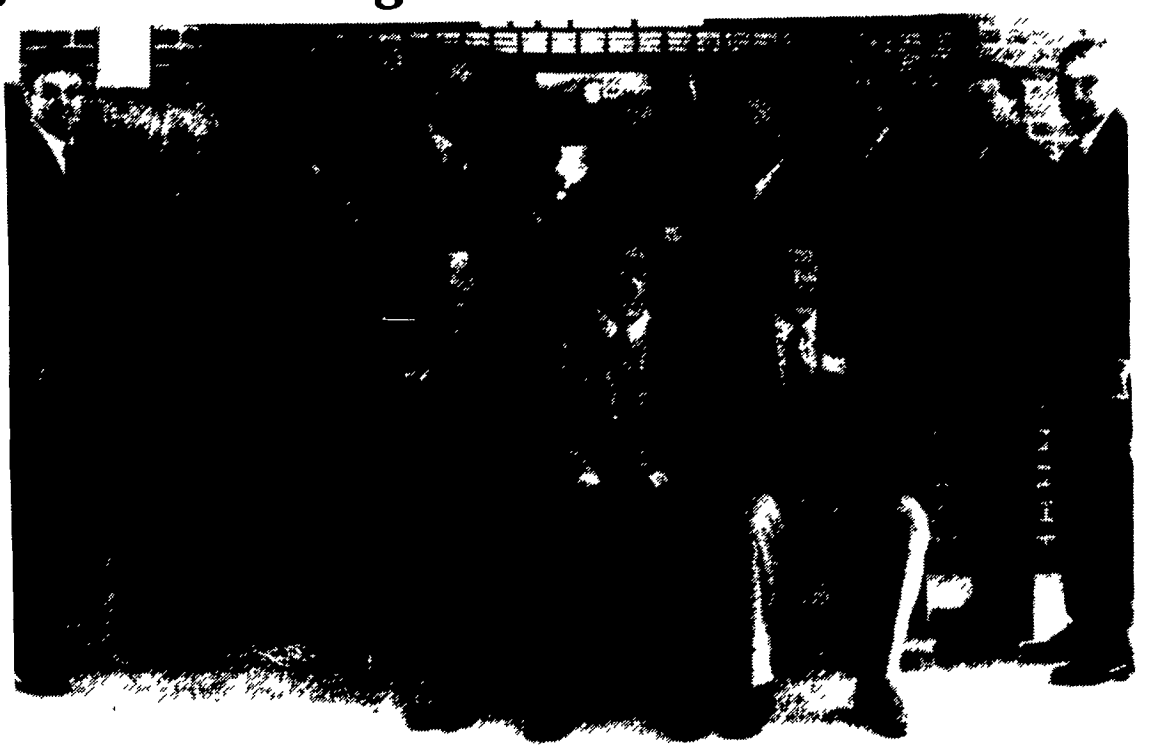
An eighth trend, he said, is that consumer "taste" may change what farmers produce. Of course, more and more different varieties and lines of produce and animal products are being raised and being made available United States consumers.

People have more choices than they have ever had and that is expected to continue, as demographics change, cultural and food education spreads, and technology allows for the production of value-added crops.

(This theme has been addressed by others, who have discussed the creation of such new food groups, as "nutricueticals" — a term meaning food that provides specific nutritional needs, and provides such nutrition that marketing suggests the foods improve health, and perhaps may reinvigorate an aging population seeking lost youth.)

A ninth trend is that farm owners will continue to become more and more "asset managers" rather than agricultural producers.

More farmer-managers will know better what their true costs of production are and what it means to the bottom line. They will invest more money off-farm to protect themselves in the higher risk farming environment, and Henderson said he expects more farms to diversify, also to limit risk.



Presenters at the 17th annual CoreStates Agri-Education Seminar are, from the left, in the back row, Darvin Boyd, Joseph Del Tito, and F. Barry Shaw with CoreStates, Kate Coler, Charles Hosler, H. Louis Moore, Lynn Henderson, Richard Pottorff, and CoreStates Keystone Market president Lawrence Delp. In the front, from the left, are Kendra Weaver, economist David Kohl and Gerald Boyd.

The 10th trend, Henderson said, is for continuing to farmers and researchers to set even higher levels for production yields.

He said that setting goals to such things as 300-bushel per acre corn yields may well become a reality, as the 100-bushel goal became.

The same with soybeans, he said, adding that perhaps 100-bushel yields will be the new realized top yields.

Also, he asked the crowd, "Why not dairy herds with average productions of 40,000-pounds of milk per lactation?" Not so many years ago, a 20,000-pound average was considered high. Today a rolling herd average in the low 30,000-pound range is not that unusual, and production by individual animals has been continually increasing.

Ultimately, however, Henderson said that the entire agricultural industry must be able to present a coordinated front to promote itself.

It is becoming fragmented, and numbers of people involved in the various agricultural enterprises are diminishing.

In order for the entire industry to remain strong against misinformation and malignment, it must join efforts to present a consolidated face and position on controversial issues.

The industry must also work together to promote American agriculture, because it does produce the safest and most dependable food supply, and is one of the most heavily regulated.

If the public doesn't know the truth about American agriculture, and how it compares to other production systems around the world, then American agriculture is open to attack through distortions and outright lies that can wrongfully erode consumer confidence.

Dairy Industry Inundated With Issues

marketing reform (it's on the U.S. Department of Agriculture Internet homepage), as well as the expansion of the Northeast Dairy Compact, and hearings are yet to be held on the proposal for establishing an emergency, temporary $13.50 basic formula price for Class I and Class II uses.

But changing alliances and mergers continue to create interest and concern.

The Jan. 1 creation of the nation's largest dairy cooperative — Dairy Farmers of America (DFA), which controls about 21 percent of the nation's milk supply — has generated some of that interest and concern, from among non-member and member farmers alike, as well as businesses relying on dairy products.

The four cooperatives that merged on Jan. 1 to form DFA were the Southern Region of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Mid-America Dairymen Inc., Milk Marketing Inc. and Western Dairymen Cooperative Inc.

DFA last week announced a joint business venture with the New Zealand Dairy Board through its United States subsidary Milk Product Holdings (North America) Inc., to make cheese together in a Midwestern facility.

The announcement of that pact with New Zealand, one of the world's largest exporters of dairy product and a leader in least-cost milk production, comes less than two months after the DFA milk marketing cooperative officially formed.

According to a DFA news releases, the cooperative has 22,000 members in 42 states and markets more than 38 billion pounds of milk.

The partnership with the New Zealand subsidary, Milk Products Holdings (North America) Inc., involves a large Italian cheese (Romano and Parmesian) production operation in Wisconsin.

In the limited explanation of the venture in a cooperative news release, the possibility remained that DFA was entering into a partnership that could threaten to displace domestic dairy production and therefore help to reduce all milk prices.

This week, spokespeople for DFA said that simply is not true. They said the cooperative has entered into a joint venture agreement with Milk Products Holdings (North America) Inc. to produce the Italian cheeses together.

They will be importing New Zealand dairy product, but the DFA-imported product will not displace domestic product, according to Lewis Gardner, chairman of DFA Northeast Council (there are six sub-councils which address regional needs).

Gardner said that the imported product from New Zealand will be used to make the Italian cheeses. He said that, for some time, DFA (through a previous member co-op) has been importing the cheese product through several other non-domestic sources.

For strategic and financial reasons, Gardner said the DFA corporate board of directors decided to pursue an exclusive, and restricted, relationship with the New Zealand company.

New Zealand is widely known for having the lowest production cost per hundredweight of milk. American dairy producers have been studying their grazing practices and low overhead milking and production techniques in order to achieve lower production costs here.

While United States dairy production is greater, New Zealand is known for being aggressive in capturing world markets, by using the New Zealand Dairy Board as a promotional and political tool in nations whose markets it seeks to penetrate.

It also has a reputation for doing common-sense marketing — finding out what the market wants and making it for the market, and being a safe, dependable and low-cost supplier.

According to DFA spokesman Dan Reuwee, the pact with the New Zealand Dairy Board is considered a strategic move in partnering the cooperative with one of the most respected global marketers in the dairy industry, in order to position itself better to export United States dairy products.

He said that DFA also has international dealings with Avonmore, an Irish dairy concern. That international venture involves pizza cheeses.

According to Reuwee, prior to the multi-cooperative merger that formed DFA, Mid-American Dairymen Inc. had operated the Italian cheese plant, manufacturing cheeses for numerous labels and in containers to serve a range of customers, from independent retailers to restaurants to institutions.

"We've been working to build exports for United States dairy products and, in the process, looking for partners," Reuwee said.

"Trade is a two-way street," he said, explaining that importing New Zealand dairy product goes hand-in-hand with exporting United States dairy product.

According to Reuwee, it is anticipated that DFA will benefit in getting established internationally a lot faster by tapping into the marketing expertise established by New Zealand.

He said New Zealand has been looking for a United States group with which to link.

However, at the same time DFA has announced the joint venture with the Milk Product Holdings Inc., it also announced it is seeking to open up the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact, and is also seeking a national floor price of $13.50 basic formula price for Class I and Class II milk.

Combined, the policy requests by DFA seem at odds:

- It could be argued that importing dairy product from New Zealand is an false open market trade deal that just decreases the odds that dairy producers will get paid properly for their milk, given the production conditions the consuming public demands of United States producers and not of the producers of the imported product.

Gardner and others have shown that even though GATT and NAFTA have opened the doors for additional agricultural product to enter the United States, that United States' agriculture trade balance is growing and healthy.

"It's going to come in anyway, and it makes sense financially," he said.

- The DFA wants to expand the Northeast Dairy Compact to include Pennsylvania, New York and Maryland, but at the same time some predict it could serve no purpose at best, or, at worst, further distort and retard the industry's recovery from the changes that are iminent as far as the government's involvement in dairy pricing, as well as distract people from learning more about the USDA proposals for change in the federal milk marketing order system before the end of the comment period, March 31.

DFA's position is that dairy farmers need money now to pay bills and debt, and that their leaders can't be put on hold until the industry adopts a new dairy pricing system.

Gardner said the cooperative's position is that ensuring a cost-of-production price for milk for the limited time that such an expanded Compact would be in effect would not allow for enough time for dairy operations to grow production significantly.

He said that, in theory, if producers would increase milk production enough under Compact pricing to drive the overall price of milk down, there are procedures detailed in the regulations that can be used to curb increased production — if the increase in production in the Compact were to go above the national average, Compact producers could be assessed for the increased production, and/or a quota system could be implemented.

The Northeast Compact currently provides dairy farmers in six New England states with a higher price for their drinking milk and was authorized in the Farm Bill as a transitional program due to end with the adoption of reform of the federal milk marketing order system, which has an official target of April 1999, .

A Cornell University Extension dairy economist said the six New England states now included in the Northeast Dairy Compact are fairly awash with milk and there were reports of dumping milk at some dairy product manufacturing plants because the flow of milk exceeded plants storage capacity.

Expanding the Northeast Compact to high production states such as New York and/or Pennsylvania, or nationally as another cooperative would have it, could lead to excessive production of non-drinking milk supplies and further drive down the price paid to farmers nationally.

Gardner said that if the Compact is expanded to additional states, then if a new federal order system isn't adopted by April 1999, then the Compact would still be in place.

- A $13.50 basic formula price floor for Class I and Class II uses could further add to lower-paying uses of milk. Cornell University dairy economist Mark Stevenson said that, without question, higher retail prices for drinking milk are related to a decrease in purchases of drinking milk, and more diversion of milk into the lower-paying uses, further driving down the overall farmer pay for milk.

The $13.50 floor price would be instituted using emergency powers by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman and be limited to a year.

Again, even though elimination of government price controls has been the expressed goal of the dairy industry, until the transition to an acceptable substitute system is adopted, dairy producers are at risk of failing.

Of the two proposals for reform of the federal milk marketing orders, DFA has announced it is in favor of option 1A, as it is referred to. The 1A proposal retains a payment structure similar to what currently exists, although allowing for some changes to reflect cost of production differences.

Secretary Glickman is in favor of the option 1B, which places much more pricing on market conditions.

The DFA is apparently right in line with other farmer group positions.

For example, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and most farmer groups have recently announced their support for expansion of the Compact.

According to Joel Rotz, dairy policy specialist for the PFB, if the Northeast Compact were in place currently for Pennsylvania, all it would do is act as a floor price, because the price currently received through the effect of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board over-order premium is higher than currently received by in the Compact.

Such an expansion may help stabilize the price in the New England states, since it would removed incentive to ship milk produced in Pennsylvania and New York into those states.

Expanding the Compact would expand the better pay price across the state. He said that roughly, producers would receive about 70 to 80 cents more form Class I milk under the Compact, were it to be in effect.

At the same time, the retail price would not be moved.

The increased price to the farmer would come from the milk handlers and processors.

Rotz said that while the whole effort to get the Compact expanded may be wasted if it does indeed stop in April 1999.

However, he noted that no matter what final proposal results from the comments received from this federal order reform proposal, and what rule eventually is adopted, that someone is not going to be satisfied and could easily challenge it in court.

Therefore, having a Compact in place, and having Congress authorize such a structure would provide a safety net for producers.

Overall, through, Rotz said the dairy situation does seem "chaotic."

Dairy Industry Is A Complex Beast

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — To be able to follow along with the potential affects and effects of the issues currently before the United States dairy industry, especially in the Northeast, at least a cursory understanding of the system of milk production, processing and delivery to the customer is needed.

Few in the dairy industry, including those who deal with it daily, claim a thorough understanding of the system.

Ironically, more claim to know how to make the situation better.

For those completely unfamiliar with the system, very simply, dairy farmers receive payment for their milk after it is used, and they have very little say in how it gets used, even in cooperatives.

Dairy farmers pay for their own entire milk production setup — land, taxes, buildings, cows, labor, consultants and professional services, animal feeds and health products, fencing, milking systems, milk cooling and storage equipment and facilities, all farm maintenance, for the milk to be hauled to a "milk handler" who either resells or uses the milk for a variety of purposes, for breeding animals, and for generic promotion efforts to encourage consumers to buy more milk and dairy products.

Depending upon the operation, the costs also include such things as employee housing, cooperative dues, milk production record keeping services, registered breed organization dues and associated costs, specialty publications and advertising.

The farmer's pay comes out of what the consumer pays for milk and dairy products and from buying products that use dairy-derived ingredients.

However, dairy farmers are the last to receive a cut.

The dairy farmer's portion is what is left over after the government, retailers, marketers, wholesalers, processors, haulers, and many others take out their portion.

The price of milk itself is a function of both supply-and-demand balances, and government-influenced limits.

Since the post-Great Depression New Deal food assurance program, the federal government and some states have maintained a minimum amount that has to be paid to farmers for their milk.

This was done so the many people who were out of work and had little to spend could afford some basic foods. Nutritional requirements were not being met for many children, and dairy products, especially whole milk, can provide many components necessary for a basic, nutritionally sound diet.

Compared to then, determining the minimum price to be paid to farmers has become extremely complicated, both because of political motivations and actions, and also because the industry is nothing as it had been when milk pricing started.

The dairy industry has changed unrecognizably from what it was during the 1940s. The federal programs changed too. Though while farmers were becoming more efficient, federal government was not.

Federal "farm bills" over the years have added to and altered the authority of the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture to set prices, and USDA regulations control price setting, such as through establishing formulas for determining fair milk prices.

Likewise, the uses of dairy products has been expanded far beyond the staples of butter, cream, cheese and milk.

Farmer and industry supported research, and private research have expanded the uses of dairy components.

In the meantime, using research-based information, American dairy farmers have been able to increase milk production per cow many fold.

Again using research-based information from both private and public sectors, farmers have been able to increase the sizes of their herds tremendously. In Pennsylvania, the largest herds are under 2,000 milking cows. In states such as Florida and California, herd size far exceeds that.

Further aggravating dairy production in traditional areas, which are generally closest to the domestic markets, transportation costs fell tremendously over that time.

Deregulation of the trucking industry during the 1970s altered much of what could be moved, where and when. Competition from independent start-ups and non-unionized haulers wreaked havoc with the established trucking industry.

It increased unemployment and decreased the standard of living for those who remained employeed in the trucking industry, though it did serve to lower the cost of some consumer goods, and increased the availability of some goods to some areas.

Further, dairy production has spread and boomed in non-traditional states, where the crops may be easier and less expensive to obtain (in some part thanks to cheap water through irrigation in dry climates that combined can create superior hay), and land prices are much lower and regulations much fewer.

For years, the federal government has controlled dairy prices.

They did this through buying up excess production at basement prices, using some for federal give-away programs and school programs (domestic and international) and storing the rest until it could be released onto the open market when open market prices would begin to climb.

After driving up a tremendous federal deficit through outstanding debt from several wars and increased defense spending starting about 1980, along with increases in domestic social spending, the federal government tried to control the growth of non-welfare domestic spending.

The greatest expense of business for the USDA has been in supporting domestic social programs.

The federal government then authorized what some still consider an ill-fated program — commonly known as the "herd buyout program" — to control the growth of dairy production and to lessen the volume of funds used annually for the program.

In the buy-out program, participating dairy farmers were to sell their entire herds for slaughter and not have any dairy production for 10 years.

While that provided an opportunity for many to leave the industry permanently, it also decreased the price of beef, did little to stem the increase in milk production, and arguably wasted taxpayer (which includes dairy farmers) money.

It also seemed to turn some public sentiment, and therefore some political sentiment, away from supporting the dairy industry.

More recently, federal policy changed and Congress withheld spending to fund the traditional market price control program, instead making farmers pay for their production overages, or herd expansions, based on documented productions of recent years.

That has stopped, but the USDA still carries a minimum milk price, although it became locked in by Congress at below the cost of production.

While production and market conditions resulted in a steep peak in dairy prices in 1996, prices dropped below most costs-of-production at the end of 1996, slowly recovering through 1997, and more recently gaining strength.

Other farm commodity support price programs were affected as well in the Farm Bill, but dairy farmers have been attempting to deal with being too successful at producing milk.

The dairy industry is a strange member of the modern-day agricultural American production industry.

While the hog, poultry, egg, and other production industries have adopted more of a contractual production agreement, whereby a grower can better determine a return on investment prior to investing, the dairy industry is apparently in an awkward transitional stage.

Dairy producers have been expanding operations tremendously in times of generally low prices. They have nothing except a record of fluctuating prices received upon which to base potential return on investments.

As it is now, from one month to the next, many dairy producers don't have any sense of security that they will receive even a zero-profit return on investment, much less an ability to offset depreciation of facilities and equipment, or pay for their own and their family's labor.

Other dramatic changes that have occured, related to the efficiencies gained through research-based information and technology, include the dramatic reduction in the number of people necessary to produce milk.

Fewer than 2 percent of the general population lives on a farm, or farms for a living. At one time most Americans farmed, and even in the 1940s, the percentage of farmers, those living on farms, and those with family living on farms, was a significant portion of the general population.

General farming knowledge and origin of food was widely known, and respect for the hard labor and low income of farming was wide, even if not necessarily desired, compared to the relatively high wages and benefits paid for industrial labor.

The shrinking of the dairy farming population, the shrinking dairy cattle population (though continually increasing production per cow), and shrinking operational funds have led to mergers and consolidations and disappearances of cooperatives, private businesses, and support industries.

As far as the changing structure of cooperatives, within the past year and a half, mergers of dairy cooperatives and consolidation of businesses have happened that have changed the structure of the industry dramatically.

Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) is the result of the Jan. 1 merging of four large cooperatives. Land O'Lakes Cooperative is the result of an earlier merger of several large cooperatives, including the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative.

DFA is the largest cooperative in the nation, with 22,000 members marketing an estimated 38 billions pounds of milk per year. It controls the marketing of about 21 percent of the nation's milk.

In the private sector, Dean Foods, among others, has been buying up family dairy processing businesses. While the effect may not be noticeable to most, it does change the nature and operational decision-making of local business.

Across the United States, dairy farmers are at odds.

People are taking sides over policies of government, business and cooperatives.

Previous alliances between some cooperatives have been severed, leaving some smaller cooperatives to fend for themselves.

Other cooperatives, mostly larger, have formed new alliances.

Part of the problem for producers in the United States dairy industry is that availability of milk is always an unknown. There are few contractual quota relationships between raw milk producer and processor.

Some dairy processors have found themselves short in supply when their usual supplier instead sells the milk to other states or businesses, because of temporary higher prices.

In other times, the processor may become swamped with milk

Dairy Vaccination Program Should Be Part Of Overall Herd Management Plan

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — No amount of vaccination use will make up for bad management, most veterinarians agree.

Importantly, producers should look at vaccines not as cure-alls but as "tools as part of your total management program," said Dr. Robert Munson, VMD with the University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center in Kennett Square.

Munson spoke to about 100 dairy producers and agri-industry representatives Tuesday at the first of the two-part Penn State-sponsored Lancaster County Dairy Days at the Farm and Home Center.

Munson told producers to "talk with their vet" about how to implement an overall vaccine program. "Sit down and decide what your aims and goals are, and move along with it."

Many times, producers spend time vaccinating and don't think beyond that. But when we vaccinate, Munson said, "do we immunize?"

The goal of a vaccine is to provide a protective immunity on several levels to fight natural infection. But all too often producers want to immunize for everything. However, in the end, does the cost and risk of using vaccine outweigh the costs of having the actual diseases present in the herd?

While there are vaccination programs for lepto and bovine virus diarrhea (BVD), there are concerns and questions about whether side effects can be present that could affect other aspects of herd health.

Munson noted that he prefers the use of modified live virus vaccine on heifers. Those vaccine types provide long-lasting immunity, few inoculating doses are required, and there are effective administration rates (oral and nasal) with low probability of hypersensitivity. Some of the disadvantages include a concern for abortions, a limited shelf life, the possibility of the vaccine reverting to a virulent state, and other reactions.

The other type of vaccine program available, a killed vaccine, is unlikely to cause disease, is stable in storage, yet has some disadvantages. Munson noted they include short-lived immunity, hypersensitivity, and the possibility of local tissue reaction at the injection site, among other factors. Also, many producers forget the importance of multiple doses to help achieve the desired immune response.

Importantly, vaccines should only be used as part of a program when suggested by a responsible veterinarian.

Producers should be aware that there is no BVD vaccine that protects against all serotypes of BVD virus in the field.

Suggestions Munson has is to use a modified live virus vaccine in heifers, not young calves. Begin vaccination of heifers after five months of age — use leptospirosis vaccine at this time and follow the initial vaccine with a booster two weeks to two months after the initial dose.

For administering vaccines, producers should design a system on the farm to expedite the vaccine administration — thus avoiding a "rodeo" that sometimes occurs for the young stock and the frustrations of trying to administer a vaccine without proper planning.

"You shouldn't try to vaccinate for everything," Munson said. "Design a program that fits your management system."

Munson also reviewed bovine virus diarrhea (BVD), its causes, symptoms, and treatment.

Importantly, BVD can wreak havoc in a herd one way: it's carried by persistently infected (PI) animals in the herd and can infect "herdmate to herdmate and herd to herd," he said.

Those PI animals "shed large quantities of virus their entire life," even though only 1-2 percent of the herd can be actively shedding the virus at any given time.

BVD is introduced into the herd commonly when buying bred heifers, Munson noted. If purchasing heifers, ensure through documentation that those heifers have been classified BVD-free.

BVD is the "most costly virus disease in Pennsylvania cattle," said Munson. All BVD is not equal, he noted, and affects the herd differently, depending the stage of gestation at the time of exposure.

Common symptoms include abortions, poor conception rates, cows returning to heat after being confirmed pregnant, abnormal heat intervals, stillbirths, or small calves. In any case, the virus is often difficult to isolate even if the producer supposes it is present in the herd.

To eliminate BVD from a herd, Munson noted that it takes a long time and perseverance because it's not easy to develop and identify.

More likely, the virus is being shed from the younger stock, because BVD is primarily a disease of young animals. The older ones infected die off after they begin shedding the virus. To eliminate the virus, producers must have a vaccination program in place "and follow it as closely as possible," he said.

Also at the Lancaster County Dairy Day, another New Bolton Center veterinarian provided information about a new program to certify Johne's Disease-free herds in the state.

According to Dr. Robert Whitlock, DVM of New Bolton and Johne's Disease expert, Pennsylvania as a state has been "fairly aggressive about Johne's Disease" control methods. Out of 180 herds in the state already signed up, 20 herds test negative.

Producers simply need to sign an agreement between them and their veterinarian and testing is available at no cost.

Eventually, Whitlock noted that someday the list of certified Johne's Disease-free herds could be listed in newspapers.

Johne's Disease, Whitlock explained, is a chronic bacterial infection of the small intestine of ruminant animals. The disease has a long incubation period of 2-10 years. It was first identified by Dr. Johne in 1895.

Whitlock spoke about a Dairy NAHMS survey in 1996 conducted with 1,200 producers in the country. Of the producers, 55 percent were fairy knowledgeable about Johne's Disease, 35 percent heard about it, and 10 percent never heard about it all. More education is needed, according to experts.

Johne's, a clustered disease, often goes undetected in the herd. Many herd owners could have it in their cattle and not know about it.

However, losses because of the disease can be substantial.

In terms of body weight at slaughter, the disease can cost producers $45 a cow. Decreased milk production can run from $200-$300 per year per cow.

Johne's is caused by a bacterium, Microbacterium paratuberculosis. It's a "first cousin" to tuberculosis, Whitlock noted.

The bacterium can be present in animals and 95 percent of them actually show no signs of the disease, according to the New Bolton Center veterinarian. About five percent will show the symptoms of weight loss, intermittent diarrhea, and some will provide the "classic" image of infection — emaciation.

The bacterium infects the small intestine and actually works to inhibit the uptake of nutrients. Basically, the animal starves to death.

The problem in herds is caused by the bacteria shedders, animals that spread the bacteria readily through manure. Young animals can ready digest the bacteria if exposed to the manure.

In the words of Dr. Christine Rossiter, from New York State, "All manure is guilty until proven otherwise," noted Whitlock.

It's important to isolate young stock from manure by providing good, clean, and dry calf hutches. Also, keep the bedding in the pens clean. Provide safe colostrum (don't pool colostrum). Keep calves and heifers away from adult cows.

Prevention of the disease starts with a closed herd. If replacements are purchased, inquire about the disease. Use good biosecurity on the farm. And ask those "hard questions," he noted, of your herd: could you have it and not know it? Can Johne's be successfully controlled? Whitlock indicated that, yes, it can be controlled, but it takes a number of years.

For the control of mastitis in the herd, it's important to provide clean, comfortable bedding for cows. The rate of mastitis in a herd is "clinically related to the bacterial counts in the bedding," according to Dr. Michaela Kristula, DVM from New Bolton Center.

Kristula said that, for clean bedding and reduced bacterial count, "sand is the absolute best" bedding, she said, with very low bacterial numbers. A six-inch layer over a dirt floor (for proper moisture drainage) is ideal.

Kristula pointed out the prevalence of bacteria in a short time with the use of sawdust. But one producer at the Dairy Day noted the uses of lime and sawdust as a good combination. The veterinarian reviewed proper procedures for pre- and post-dipping of teats. She emphasized the importance of proper cleaning methods, hygiene, and other factors.

Dr. Robert Whitlock spoke about the effects of bovine leukosis virus on the herd, how it affects cows and various prevention and control measures.

Part 2 of the Lancaster County Dairy Days is scheduled Tuesday, March 3 at the Farm and Home Center.

New, Beginning Farm Workshop

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — One of America's most dynamic and innovative farmers will address the New and Beginning Farmer Workshop on March 7, 1998 here at the Holiday Inn.

Promoting food production that is environmentally, emotionally, and economically enhancing for both producer and consumer, Joel Salatin is a third generation farmer who enthralls audiences with his presentations about his family's 550-acre Virginia farm.

A word craftsman, Salatin describes his diverse farm enterprises with ear-catching phrases: salad bar beef, pastured poultry, pigaerator pork, and pastured rabbits. Through what he calls "relationship marketing" to 400 "cheerleader" customers, he receives full retail dollars for everything the farm produces.

Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. will welcome the expected crowd of 300 new and beginning farmers to the day-long event scheduled from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Other speakers will tell workshop attendees how they worked into their family's business or how they started from scratch.

Afternoon sessions will supply helpful information to beginners on dairy, fruit, vegetables, beef, poultry, hog, and other types of farming enterprises. In addition to production information, business planning and farm management information will be presented.

Salatin will round out the conference with his discussion on building your enterprise for the next generation. He said "We can talk all day about the environment and clean food, but if our farms are not fun, not profitable, or too much work, our children won't want them and we're spitting in the wind. Romancing the next generation into farming is the ultimate test of sustainability."

For more information about this workshop, call Pennsylvania Farm Link at (717) 558-7726.

Dairy Industry Is A Complex Beast

when the supplier has more than it can sell at a higher price.

Because raw milk is quickly perishable, selling milk is a constantly renewed game of changing values — after all the higher-paying uses of milk are satisfied, the rest of the milk is sold at less profit for lower-paying uses; after those uses are satisfied, the demand for even lower-paying uses are then satisified, even if at below cost.

The quantity of milk available to be sold for all uses is a variable, and that makes the farm price extremely volatile.

The milk pricing system attempts to create an overall farmer-paycheck value for milk, after taking into account how it was used.

The more excess milk sent to market, the less the farmer receives, even if it was all used.

The less milk sent to market, the less chance that those needing it to make lower-paying dairy products will get it at a decent price.

Then, three things can happen — either the farmer gets slightly more money, or an alternative source for milk is found and the farmer is out, or that low-rung processor gets out of the business and the farmer is out.

The dairy industry is not acting in a vacuum. Similar changes are affecting almost the entire spectrum of human activity in recent post-Cold War times.

Some of the changes have caused concern for stability and dependability.

A recent published report stated that personal bankruptcies ballooned during the past three years while half were because of loss of employment, many of those surveyed reported that credit cards and easy credit were involved.

Accumulating American consumer credit debt has been identified recently as a major influence in the continued economic growth of the United States.

Recently, some economists have predicted that growing consumer credit debt, combined with an expected recession (as part of a "normal" economic cycle, which hasn't been normal) could result in very serious problems.

According to published reports, some legislators have already discussed changing some of the bankruptcy laws.

Outside of internal pressures from regulations and, in some cases, a lack of regulation, outside pressures persist.

Pressure from global influences upon United States domestic dairy policy has been strong.

For example, through the New Zealand Dairy Board, the New Zealand government has been lobbying for years in Washington D.C. to change United States policy to make it easier for New Zealand to ship its dairy product here, half way around the world.

New Zealand currently supplies markets around the world with various and specially manufactured dairy products. It supplies dairy products to the tourism-dependent islands south of the United States, such as Barbados and Jamaica, for example.

In 1995, the New Zealand Dairy Board, represented by a Washington D.C. firm, called for the elimination of United States price supports, and allowing a totally free market situation prevail.

With the passing of the 1996 Farm Bill, the United States dairy industry now has a timetable for the removal of United States government domestic price controls.

However, New Zealand can't reasonably be credited with the change in United States policy.

In the United States, there are many businesses which export agricultural products and commodities around the world, such as Archer-Daniels Midland (which had been under investigation for price collusion). They want better abilities to place their lower-cost products in foreign markets and expand their sphere of business.

In some cases, a company may be based in the United States but also have production facilities in other parts of the world, or wish to purchase products or commodities from non-domestic sources.

Former and continued United States defense-related policy also has international implications.

United States political policy toward former war allies, world peace allies, and defeated nations also led to the exodus of many manufacturing, industrial and textile industries to countries with little environmental and safety regulations, and the benefit of poverty-paid labor.

Emerging democracies require rewards for their people in order to keep democractically inclined leadership popular.

Allowing those nations to be protectionist, while allowing open access to the United States consuming market has provided those nations with economic strength and growth and a higher standard of living. The result has been to showcase the benefits of democracy to neighboring, non-democratically inclined neighboring nations.

With the Cold War supposedly over, the need to continue those one-sided trade relationships has ended, forcing truer self-reliance for those nations, which means an economic readustment, and possible recession.

With the passage of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and the North American Free Trade Agreement, more dairy product is now being allowed to be imported in the United States, forcing increasing competition with domestic production.

However, United States policy is changing with regard to those nations that have been receiving beneficial considerations to help maintain world peace and build support for democracy there.

Currently some of the economies have been faltering as the beginnings of real democracy has begun to split up the closely tied government/businesses relationships that were established in initial efforts to convert those nations to democracy.

Further, with the reduction of United States military posts around the world, money from United States military no longer stimulates some foreign economies as it had.

In order to be successful in achieving long-term world peace and security for many people of the world, United States leadership has the goal of not acting too hastily in removing, or calling for the removal of all of the aritificial supports from those nations, such as South Korea.

Differing environmental, labor and safety regulations are issues which were mostly ignored in the final passage of the GATT and NAFTA trade agreements because they may have been impossible to justify immediately, and could have pulled the rug out from those nations' economies and created a barrier to sending product to the United States.

In the meantime, there are efforts by some to ensure that United States world peace negotiators don't act too freely in giving away concessions on any of those issues with regard to agricultural production.

That agriculture is a national security issue has been a common theme of Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr. He is not alone. Others also have made the case that any nation that doesn't have a dependable food or water supply is a nation at risk of attack or submission.

For this and other reasons, agriculture was the biggest obstacle in settling on a GATT, after several years of failure to deliver and agreement.

Most trading nations are not equal in the adoption of trading restrictions. Negotiating trade involves other nation's domestic policies, because international policy affects domestic policy.

Currently, for the dairy industry, it seems the outcome of events, both domestically and internationally, is uncertain because the dairy industry isn't sure what the government will do, the government isn't sure what the dairy industry will do, and neither can be certain what other nations will do.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Corn, No.2y — 3.03 bu., 5.42 cwt.

Wheat, No. 2 — 3.17 bu., 5.29 cwt.

Barley, No. 3 — 2.36 bu., 5.05 cwt.

Oats, No. 2 — 1.76 bu., 5.48 cwt.

Soybeans, No. 1 — 6.59 bu., 11.00 cwt.

Ear Corn — 84.43 ton, 4.22 cwt.

Alfalfa Hay — 151.25 ton, 7.56 cwt.

Mixed Hay — 151.00 ton, 7.55 cwt.

Timothy Hay — 138.00 ton, 6.9 cwt.

First Annual State Convention

mented the twelve breeders who received them. Twenty-one 100,000 pound production certificates were also awarded at this time to fifteen breeders.

Election of Officers for 1956 results as follows: H.M. Gans, , Gans, PA. president; Bayard L. Hindenach, Easton, Vice president; John Wehr, Mifflinburg, (incumbent) Treasurer and Arthur Nesbitt, State College, re-elected Secretary and re-hired as State Fieldman.

Altogether, the convention was a striking success and much favorable comment was heard on the idea of the earlier date plus the new location each year for the session. Next year the Northeast section will be the hosts to the convention and plans are already under way.

Folks were heard to express their appreciation to Earl Moore for his efforts in presenting the movies on the 1955 National Convention. Many folks saw themselves on a movie screen for the first time in their lives.

The Southwestern Holstein breeders organization, J. Lewis Williams, General Chairman, and his entire staff of committee members are to be congratulated upon a very successful event.

Tasty, Attractive Low-Fat Foods

Nancy Wiker, right, offers a tableful of tasty, low-fat desserts to participants attending the workshop held at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — People with health and weight problems often need to adjust eating habits to encourage healthier living. For many, the most frustrating is forfeiting sweets or adapting recipes to low-fat status.

While more and more low-fat recipes are being published in magazines, people are often disappointed in the taste. Cooks hate to waste time and money on ingredients to produce a dessert that doesn't meet their taste qualifications. On the other hand, there are many great-tasting low-fat desserts.

One of the best ways to find these is to attend a workshop sponsored by your county extension service. One of these was held recently at the Lancaster County Extension office. Nancy Wiker, family and consumer sciences agent, prepared a tableful of eye-appealing and tasty dishes for participants to sample. In addition, participants received information and recipes to help them adapt their own recipes.

"Lowfat desserts often taste best if eaten immediately," Wiker said. "Low-fat baked goods often get tough after a day or two."

This is because fat contributes to a tender texture in food.

For those who must limit fat intake but still crave chocolate, Wiker suggested using mini-chocolate chips in place of regular ones. Not as many are needed to spread the chocolate throughout the item. Also, try one of the new low-fat chocolate chip varieties on supermarket shelves. The taste of these have improved considerably, and many people cannot differentiate between the low-fat and regular varieties.

The advantage of attending a workshop is that it gives you an opportunity to sample recipes to determine if you would want to prepare them at home.

You can also adapt your favorite recipes to non-fat versions. Reduction in the amount of fat in a recipe will result in the greatest calorie savings since fat has more than twice the calories per gram than protein or carbohydrate.

Be prepared for some change in texture. Less fat will produce a more "cakey" texture, and the cookies will be soft.

This may take some experimenting, but here are a few of the tips Wiker shared:

• Try reducing the total amount of fat in a recipe by one-fourth. This works best in fruit and nut breads, cake recipes, and sauces. Do not do this in rolled cookies or pie crust recipes where the fat is critical. Drop cookies might lend themselves to fat reduction.

• If the recipe calls for oil, use an oil that is lower in saturated fat. The lowest is canola, then sunflower or corn or olive. It will not reduce the caloric value if you do this but will reduce saturated fat. Saturated fat has the effect of raising the blood level of cholesterol.

Light oils do not have less fat or calories. They are lighter in color and flavor. Vegetable oils never have cholesterol. All oils have 120 calories per tablespoon.

• If the recipe calls for shortening, it means solid vegetable shortening that is hydrogenated. Do not substitute oil. This will alter the texture greatly. You will need to reduce liquid somewhere in the recipe. Try to find a recipe already designed for oil. Butter flavored shortening behaves like shortening, not butter.

If you substitute butter or margarine for shortening, there may be a change in the texture of cookies and other baked products, mainly because of the water in the butter, which will usually cause the batter to spread more as it bakes.

• Salted butter will keep longer than unsalted butter.

• If you use a stick-type margarine that is 100 percent corn oil, it will make a softer dough than other margarine. In cookies, you will need to chill for at least five hours before rolling. You may even find it works better if you chill in the freezer. Any stick-type margarine that has as its first listed ingredient a liquid oil will behave the same way. Soft tub-type margarines behave differently in recipes that stick-type. So do not use it in baking cookies.

• There are many new spreads and stick-form diet margarines that have less fat than regular margarine. The products have increased water added and they behave differently than butter or margarine in recipes. Recipes are developed especially for the use of these products. The products may have 68 percent fat, 71 percent, 55 percent, 40 percent, even a no-fat margarine. Do not try to bake with one of these products having less than 50 calories per tablespoon or 5 to 6 grams fat. Carefully read the label on your favorite brand of margarine because some have recently been changed with little clear warning on the package.

• Some substitute equal amounts of unsweetened applesauce in cakes, muffins, quick breads, and brownies. This will produce a more moist product. It will not work for a rolled cookie.

Another recommendation is to use prunes instead of fat. This works in some recipes but the flavor of the prunes is not always compatible with the overall desired effect.

The pectin and sorbitol in the prunes act to tenderize and moisten. Place ¼ cup light corn syrup, 2 tablespoons sugar, a 12-ounce package of pitted prunes in a food processor for 5 seconds, then add ⅓ cup water slowly while processing until smooth. Spoon into an airtight container and store in the refrigerator for up to 2 months.

• Low or non-fat yogurt is also being substituted in cake mixes. See the package directions for guidelines. It can be used to replace half the fat in cookies. The finished product is more dense than the fat version.

• Reduced fat recipes may need shorter baking times.

While consuming too much fat may contribute to such problems as obesity, heart disease, and cancer, it is important to realize that the body does require some fat. Fats carry fat-soluble vitamins A, D, E, and K and aid in their absorption in the body. Fats insulate the body and protect vital organs.

The Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommend limiting total fat intake to no more than 30 percent of calories. The average intake of fat is approximately 34-36 percent of calories. To determine how many calories and fat grams you need a day to maintain your ideal weight, contact your county Penn State Extension listed in the phone book directory.

CHERRY-FILLED CHOCOLATE ANGEL CAKE ROLL

Cake:
½ cup powdered sugar
16-ounce package angel food cake mix
¼ cup unsweetened cocoa
1¼ cups water

Filling:
2 21-ounce cans cherry pie filling
2 teaspoons almond extract

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Cut parchment to fit bottom of two jelly roll pans. Sprinkle powdered sugar onto two clean lint-free towels.

In a large bowl, combine cake mix and cocoa. Add water, beat at low speed until moistened; beat at medium speed one minute. Spread half batter into each of prepared pans.

Bake cakes, one at a time on middle oven rack 10-14 minutes or until top springs back when touched lightly in center. Loosen edges with spatula; invert immediately onto sugared towel. Carefully remove parchment. Starting at shorter end, roll up cake in towel; cool 20 minutes on wire rack. Repeat with remaining cake.

Combine filling ingredients. Carefully unroll cake, remove towel, spread filling, and roll up again loosely, incorporating filling. Place on serving platter, seam side down. To serve, cut into 1-inch slices

Yield: 10 servings of 170 calories, no fat.

This has more of a cocoa flavor rather than heavy chocolate.

Yield: 10 servings of 170 calories, no fat.

RASPBERRY KISSES

2 egg whites
Pinch salt
2 tablespooons rasperry gelatin
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons vinegar
½ cup mini chocolate chips or coconut, chopped fine

Heat oven to 250 degrees. Line two baking sheets with parchment paper.

Beat egg whites with salt until foamy. Add gelatin and sugar gradually; beat until stiff peaks form and sugar is dissolved. Mix in vinegar. Fold in chips or coconut.

Drop from a teaspoon onto cookie sheets covered with parchment paper. Bake for 25 minutes. Turn oven off; leave kisses in oven 20 minutes longer. Yield 4¼ dozen

May freeze if desired.

DOUBLE CHOCOLATE CUPCAKES

1½ cups all-purpose flour
½ cup sugar
¼ cup unsweetened cocoa
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup orange juice
⅓ cup water
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup semisweet chocolate chips
1 teaspoon powdered sugar

Combine flour, sugar, cocoa, baking soda, and salt in a medium bowl. Make a well in the center.

Combine orange juice, water, oil, vinegar, and vanilla; add to dry ingredients all at once, stirring just until moistened. Fold in chocolate chips.

Spoon into lined muffin pans, filling two-thirds full. Bake at 375 degrees for 12 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean. Remove from pans and cool on wire rack. Sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Makes 1 dozen, 153 calories each, 5.5 g. fat.

Use mini chips instead of regular, because you don't need to use as many. Also low-fat chips taste almost the same as regular chocolate chips.

Chocolate Meringues and Cinnamon Apple Crostata taste as elegant as they appear.

CHOCOLATE MERINGUES

2 egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon vinegar
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon unsweetened cocoa

Heat oven to 275 degrees. Line baking sheet with parchment paper. In a small bowl, beat egg whites, salt, and vinegar until foamy. Gradually add sugar and vanilla, beating until stiff peaks form. Sift cocoa over beaten egg whites and fold into mixture.

Using a heaping tablespoonful of egg white mixture, drop six individual mounds of mixture onto parchment sheet. Make a deep well in the center, spreading egg white mixture to form a 3-inch circle.

Bake at 275 degrees for 45 minutes or until crisp. Turn off oven. Keep door closed for 1½ hours. Remove from oven and cool completely. Remove from parchment.

Just before serving, fill with fresh fruit and drizzle with fat-free fudge sauce. Yield: 6 servings, 150 calories each, no fat.

May freeze in tightly-closed container.

CINNAMON APPLE CROSTATA

1 refrigerated pie crust, flat
½ cup sugar
4 teaspoons cornstarch
2 teaspoons cinnamon
4 cups thinly sliced peeled apples
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons chopped walnuts or pecans

Bring pie crust to room temperature. Heat oven to 450 degrees.

In medium bowl, combine ½ cup sugar, cornstarch, and cinnamon. Add apples and toss. Place crust on ungreased baking sheet. Spoon apple mixture onto center of crust, leaving a 2-inch border. Fold edge of crust over apples; crimp slightly. Brush edge with water; sprinkle with 1 teaspoon sugar.

Bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes or until crust is golden brown. Sprinkle pecans over mixture. If necessary, cover crust with aluminum foil to prevent excessive browning. Bake an additional 5-15 minutes or until apples are tender. Cool 30 minutes before serving. If desired, serve with vanilla frozen yogurt.

Yield: 8 servings, 220 calories, 9 g. fat.

RASPBERRY FILLED JELLY ROLL

¼ cup flour
¼ teaspoons baking powder
Pinch salt
3 eggs
¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons water
½ teaspoon vanilla
Confectioner's sugar
1 cup raspberry preserves or softened ice cream

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Line jelly-roll pan with parchment paper or greased waxed paper.

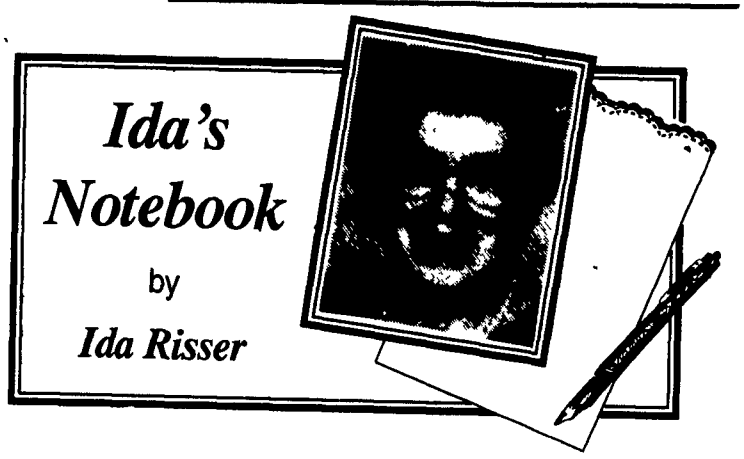
Sift flour several times with baking powder and salt.

Beat eggs until thick, gradually beat in sugar, and continue beating until the mixture is light and makes a ribbon trail.

Stir in water and vanilla, sprinkle the flour on the mixture all at once and beat until smooth. Pour into prepared pan and spread evenly to corners.

Bake in oven for 12-15 minutes, or until lightly browned around edges but still pale, though firm to touch in center. Avoid overbaking.

Loosen edges. Turn out onto clean towel that has been sprinkled with confectioners' sugar. Remove parchment carefully. Trim sides to make a neat edge and remove crust. Spread with preserves and roll up gently by tilting towel. Allow to cool. Sprinkle generously with confectioners' sugar before serving.



Time marches on and tomorrow is March 1. Time to think of outside work if we don't get a late winter.

In the meantime, I'll spend my time finishing the red and blue braided rug and cooking. I still make some of the dishes that my mother made for her family. Last week we had "schnitz and knepp" or dried apples cooked with ham and dumplings on top.

When some of our children come home, I make pig stomach as it is usually much more than two people can eat in two meals. Another dish that I make when we have extra people here is kidney creole. Stuffed beef heart is a special treat too. And, when Easter arrives there is always some of our own smoked tongue. These organ meats are different from the regular run of food but maybe that is why they are special.

At one time we smoked all of our own ham, sausage, bacon and bolognas. My parents did too until their wooden smokehouse caught on fire and burned. Our brick smokehouse stands in the middle of our garden and has seen 185 years of use.

Another item that not everyone eats is dried vegetables. There are tins and more tins of dried string beans in our basement. They were always soaked and then cooked with slabs of bacon. My dried corn is a special treat, if only because there is not as much of it as of frozen corn. We also dry soybeans and asparagus beans. These foods can be stored for years and still be tasty.

We all get unexpected surprises.

Sometimes, they're less than welcome.

Like walking out your back door and slipping on ice. Finding a flat tire on your car. Or having your accountant inform you that you owe more income tax than you estimated.

Much more welcome are the pleasant surprises.

An unexpected phone call from a long-lost friend. A letter saying you've won something (actually won something, not one of those junk-mail come-ons). The magnificent rainbow like a friend recently spied in the midst of a snowsquall. Or, having your accountant call you back to tell you he made a mistake in figuring your tax and that you will actually get a refund.

Even tiny surprises are day-brighteners. Like the one I found upon peeking in the greenhouse one morning last week.

There, at the top of a long stem above a cluster of foliage, was a giant, calla lily flower. Ivory-white, with a waxy texture, the magnificent bloom was absolutely stunning and totally unexpected to pop out here in the middle of winter's chilly, gray weather.

This yard-high plant with its lush, arrowhead-shaped foliage began life as a small shoot snitched from a friend. Well, not actually snitched. Her calla plant had wintered here last year. Before returning it, I repotted the plant and removed one of the young shoots it had grown in the interim.

The baby lily thrived in manure-rich potting soil, pushing up ever-larger leaves as its roots poked outward and downward. From a four-inch pot, the calla moved to an eight-incher, and then into a large, nursery-stock container. It was all set to summer out on the porch, and maybe, if the plant felt happy there, even bloom.

I couldn't have imagined a more delightful promise of spring.

But companion plants blossoming nearby have also responded to the lengthening daylight and stronger sunshine. Geraniums are sporting flower clusters of bright red, glo-pink, and deep fuschia shades. Scruffy-looking impatiens are pushing out new buds, a petunia tentatively opens a purple blossom and the lobelia plants moved inside to winter cover themselves with deep, heavenly-blue flowers. And the first pot of paperwhite daffodils are filling the kitchen with heavenly fragrance.

Outside, the response is also evident, if a bit more subtle. Our first crocus, at a sheltered corner of the house, spread yellow and purple blooms when the sun shines, then curl back up into fetal buds at sunset. Topmost limbs of our aged pussy willow, a good 20 feet above the lawn, are covered with furry, white catkins. And the more sheltered forsythia bushes are on the verge of popping their buds.

Meanwhile, our orchardist neighbors chew their nails, anxiously watch thermometers and long for colder weather. Buds pushing so early have little protection against early-spring cold snaps.

So, thank you, Mother Nature, for a late-winter surprise like a calla bloom. And, we fresh peach lovers would be ever-so-grateful if you'd turn the bloomin' temperatures outside down for just a little while longer.

Fall Floriculture Plants For Profit

LEBENSBURG (Cambria Co.) – Penn State Cooperative Extension has announced a new program designed to assist growers interested in producing fall-potted plants.

Fall Floriculture Plants for Profit will be held Tuesday, March 31, at the Arena Restaurant in Bedford from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

This program will provide growers with the tools to successfully grow profitable, fall-blooming potted plants.

Whether you've grown these crops in the past or are just getting started, this program will give you information you need to grow the best fall plants around. While early spring may seem to be a little early to start thinking about fall plants, mums cuttings are set in June and need to be ordered very soon.

Preregistration is required because class size is limited and program materials need to be ordered. The cost of the program is $20 per person and includes all program materials, lunch, and morning beverages.

For information and registration, call Steve Bogash at (814)693-3265. Registration brochures will also be available at Bedford, Cambria, and Somerset cooperative extension offices.

Diabetic Cooking

Careful meal planning is essential in managing blood glucose levels. Although there is no one diet for diabetes, nutritional recommendations changed drastically in 1994 when published studies gave priority to the total amount of carbohydrate rather than the source. Carbohydrate, the key nutrient in food that affects blood glucose levels, is the same whether it comes from, bread, fruit or milk.

Scientific evidence shows that table sugar can be used in moderation by individuals with type I or type II diabetes without sacrificing blood glucose control.

Although these recipes should be able to be incorporated into your menu, it is important to follow your mealplan as determined by your physician and registered dietitian, eating about the same amount of protein each day.

Featured Recipe

Kathy Kochan has had diabetes since age 5. Perhaps that is why she looks forward to dessert and refuses to watch everyone elese enjoy it while she munches on a piece of plain fruit.

For years, Kathy, who enjoys cooking, developed recipes that she can eat without feeling guilty. She has compiled these in the "Diabetic Goodie Book," a 256-page book published by Appletree Press, Inc.

"Most of the recipes are prepared with fruit for natural sugar and sweetness, since I personally do not use artificial sweeteners," Kathy said.

Kathy has taught cooking classes so that she has a good grasp on what students want in a cookbook: simple instructions on how to prepare healthy, tasty food quickly and easily.

Laundry Balls – What Are They All About?

Just what are these laundry disks, balls, globes, rings, cubes, stones, and crystals all about? These new laundry devices claim to let you do away with laundry detergent forever. There are several versions of the product on the market that challenge the need to use detergent when washing clothes. For $30-$80 you can help save the environment by not using harsh detergents and fabric softeners, save money you would spend on laundry products, and extend the life of your clothes. These disks or balls also claim to be antibacterial, hypoallergenic, sanitize clothes and last from 500-2500 washes.

More than 20 variations of this product, which activates the "natural cleansing power" of water, are now on the market. According to product information, some contain "electrically-charged" ceramic beads that lower the surface tension of the water, making it better able to penetrate the fabric. Others use the concept of "structured water" that causes water molecules to disassociate because of "far-infrared electro magnetic waves". Still others use copper and silver to release electrons that produce ionized oxygen, which breaks up dirt and organic compounds.

This device was tested in several laboratory settings including Maytag, Whirlpool and Consumer Reports. Several cleaning combinations were used. Each combination was tested several times. In the first group, stained items were washed in water only, the next combination was stained clothing and the laundry ball. In the third group an enzyme product was added along with the laundry ball and clothes. In the last combination only liquid laundry detergent was added to the dirty clothes.

The findings from the tests indicate that when used alone, the laundry ball produced the same results as washing with plain water. When enzymes and boosters were added to the laundry ball wash load the results were a little better than water-only wash. Washing with the liquid detergent clearly gave better results than any other cleaning agent.

The University of Minnesota did both field tests and laboratory tests on the ceramic laundry disk. In laboratory tests, the disc only wash showed poor cleaning, however, the wash load using the disc plus one teaspoon of detergent in the wash produced the same results as the regular detergent wash. In field tests, the disc plus a laundry aid (pre-treatment) performed as well as detergent plus a laundry aid. Nearly half of the participants in the field tests were as satisfied with the discs as they were with their standard laundry detergent. Overall, the reusable ceramic laundry disc performed better than water but not as well as detergent.

As for the claims of structured water, far-infrared electro magnetic waves, and electrically charged ceramic beads, Dr. Hugh Cartwright of Oxford University, England, comments that the claims "sound implausible... and are advertising hype."

Washing with water only will remove much of the solid granular dirt in clothes due to mechanical action. It should be noted that it may take several weeks for the residual detergent to wash out of clothing. Most of the product information indicates that pre-treatment or a little laundry detergent is needed for grease, oil, and extra dirty items. Water does not dissolve oil-based stains, thus over time, graying and yellowing will occur. Some product information indicated the need for a little brightener such as borax.

WILLIAMSPORT (Lycoming Co.) — You've probably been hearing a lot about body mass index (BMI) lately. This is a method to determine whether or not your weight poses any health risk.

BMI is a measurement based on your weight and height (kilograms/meters) and is highly correlated with body fat. The height and weight calculation help to determine whether you are at a healthy weight or have too much body fat.

Information from the Lycoming County Extension office includes instructions on how to figure out your BMI.

To figure your BMI, multiply your weight in pounds by 705, divide by your height in inches and then divide again by your height.

For example: If you weight 150 pounds and you are 5 feet 4 inches tall, (64 inches) youo would do the following: 150 pounds X 705 = 105,770 divided by 64 inches = 1,652, divided by 64 inches again = 25.8 or a BMI of 26.

Calculating your BIM:

1. Multiply your weight in pounds by 705.
2. Divide by your height in inches
3. Divide by your height again.

The result is your BMI

In general the risk of disease, especially heart disease, diabetes and several common cancers is lowest for BMI between 21 and 25, then it increases slightly between 25 and 27, substantially between 27 and 30 and dramatically for scores over 30.

Recent statistics show that 33 percent of adult Americans have a BMI of 27 or higher, resulting in more than 300,000 lives lost annually due to weight-related illnesses.

Losing and maintaining as little as 5 percent of initial body weight is likely to result in significant health improvements for you.

He doesn't remember the name or any other ingredients it might have contained, but the mixture was made in a deep gray graniteware lidded pot.

ANSWER — Jo Marie Snyder, New Bloomfield, wanted to know if there is a book about where cooking ingredients such as baking soda, baking powder, and alum come from and how they were discovered to work in cooking. What is cream of tarter or cream of wheat? Thanks to Bonnie Gibble, Annville, for recommending the cookbook, "Cookwise," which explains how ingredients work in recipes. Bonnie did not say where the cookbook can be purchased so check with your bookstore and library.

Thanks to Sally Rinaedl, Valley View, for writing that last year her family visited a small winery in western Pennsylvania and discovered the orgin of cream of tarter, which is a sediment from making wines that ferment. The winery said that all the cream of tarter produced comes from this process.

Also, Betty Light, Lebanon, writes that she saw the cookbook, "The Visual Food Enclyclopedia, The definitive practical guide to food and cooking," for sale at Ollies in Harrisbury. The cookbook tells the origin of vegetables, nuts, and baking products such as cream of tarter, etc. The publisher is Macmillan. Most bookstores can probably order the book for you.

ANSWER — Valerie Miller, Honesdale, wanted a recipe for pork tongue souse that tastes similar to John F. Martin's brand. Thanks to Josephine Matenus, Dallas, for sending a recipe.

Souse Or Jellied Pig's Feet

Salt brine
2 pigs feet
1 pork tongue
½ cup vinegar

Make a salt brine strong enough to float an egg in it. Soak the pigs feet and tongue for 10-14 days until the meat has a nice pink color.

Drain and boil in clear water several hours until the meat falls off the bones.

Discard bones, gristle, and skin. Cut meat very fine and divide into custard cups. Bring broth to a full boil, add vinegar and pour over meat. Stir and let cool. To serve, unmold and slice.

ANSWER — Marian Herman, Quakertown, wanted a scrapple recipe made with buckwheat flour to make in a small batch such as five pounds. Thanks to Josephine Matenus, Dallas, for sending a recipe.

Scrapple

8-10 pounds pork butts
1¼ pounds liver beef
1½ pounds onions
4 tablespoons salt
4 tablespoons pepper
Approximately 3 pounds pure buckwheat flour

Use large pot such as a canner. Cut pork into cubes, put into pot. Cover with water, three inches over meat. Boil until tender.

Cut liver into pieces, add to meat and boil for 10 minutes. Next, take all the meat out of pot, leaving the liquid in pot. Grind meat with coarse meat cutter, put into pot, grind onions and put in pot to boil until onions looked glazed, about 10 minutes. Add pure buckwheat flour, small amounts at a time, mixing fast. Add enough flour and mix until the meat mixture pulls away from the pot. Put into bread pans.

ANSWER — A faithful reader wanted a recipe to make potato donuts like those sold at the state Farm Show. Thanks to Josephine Matenus, Dallas, for sending a recipe.

Potato Doughnuts

3 eggs, beaten well
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons lard
¾ cup warm mashed potatoes
3 cups flour, sifted
3½ teaspoons baking powder

Fat for deep frying. Combine all ingredients. Dough is sticky so put in refrigerator for about 3 hours.

ANSWER — G. Halteman wanted to know how to make homemade butter from goats milk. Contrary to the belief that butter can't be made from goat's milk because the globules of goat's milk is spread throughout, a Lehighton reader writes that that she makes butter from goat's milk. She has raised goats for 20 years and all her family loves to drink the milk, and eat the butter and cheese made from it. She writes that goat's milk is very delicate and harder to handle than cow's milk. If not handled properly it gets a strong taste, which we call "goaty-flavored" and do not like, although some people may not mind it.

This is the process: "After we milk the goats and bring the milk to the house, the milk is strained through a cloth or filter and bottled for drinking. The extra milk is put into stainless steel bowls that have been sterilized with lids so that the milk will not pick up any odors or flavors from the other food stored in the refrigerator. The first day a slight film of butterfat forms on the top. By the third day, the cream will be much heavier that the first day. Skim off the cream and put it into a clean wide-mouth quart jar and freeze it. Keep doing this until you have two quarts frozen cream. To make the butter, place the two quarts of frozen cream on your sink or counter until it reaches room temperature or 60 degrees. Pour it into a one-gallon glass butter churn, hand crank the butter. After washing the buttermilk out of the butter, lightly salt if desired. We usually get about three cups butter more or less depending on the butterfat in the cream.

We put the butter into plastic one-cup containers and freeze. We have found out it keeps better for us this way. When it is to be used for baking, take out the amount you need, let it come to room temperature and when it gets soft enough to spread, use it.

Dairy Farmers Find Triplicity A Blessing

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — A young dairy farming family of three,has found that triplicity in other aspects of their life also can be counted as a blessing.

Allen and Eileen Heagy, who have an 18-month-old son, Kevin, have been dairy farming on their own for two years on a 55-acre farm just north of Lebanon city.

Recently, one of their mostly grade Holsteins gave birth to triplets.

While that isn't necessarily a blessing for dairy purposes, Allen said he intends to keep the two bull calves for six months to raise for sale as feeders, and the heifer calf may join the rest of their 70-head milking string, although heifers tend to be sterile if part of a multiple birth.

Allen said that in his family the set of triplets was a first. "Mom and dad said they don't remember every having any."

His parents, David and June Heagy, dairy farm in South Annville. They ship milk to Mt. Joy Farmers Cooperative.

The father of the triplets is a locally purchased bull.

That may prevent Allen from registering the offspring, which may prevent him from getting a higher price on heifers or bulls, but he said he is getting good milking cows by using only local bulls that come from dams with records of 35,000 pounds milk or more and those that classify at 90 points or better.

Allen and Eileen Heagy and son Kevin show the triplet calves born to one of their grade Holstein cows in their 70-head milking string.

Why is acid rain so bad?
Let's start with the acids — and the bases. Scientists use a scale of one to 14, called pH, to measure the strength of something when it's dissolved in water. Acids have a pH of one to 6.9. Seven is neutral. At the other end of the scale are the bases. They cancel out the acids. Lime (the kind that's part of fertilizer and a type of stone — not the fruit) is a base, because it has a pH above seven.
Rainfall has always been slightly acidic. But burning fossil fuels such as coal and oil releases sulfur dioxide and nitrogen dioxide gases into the air. These gases react with the water in clouds to make sulfuric acid and nitric acid, which then fall back to Earth as acid rain.
Some lands, like Ohio, are rich with high-sulfur coal. The surrounding ecosystem naturally balances out potential acid increase. Ohio's water tends to have a basic pH, and there is a lot of lime in its rockbed. But once sulfuric acid is in the clouds, wind can carry it thousands of miles. Then, if it rains in an area without natural buffers, there's a chance the acid could build up in ponds, streams and soil. That disrupts the plants in the water, the fish, and the animals that eat fish, like birds and bears.
Refineries and factories use coal or oil because it's the most economical, efficient way to deliver energy They've reduced the problem by installing special ways to collect the sulfur before it's released into the air. You can help, too, by conserving energy. That way, you reduce the amount of energy — and the coal-burning — needed in the first place.

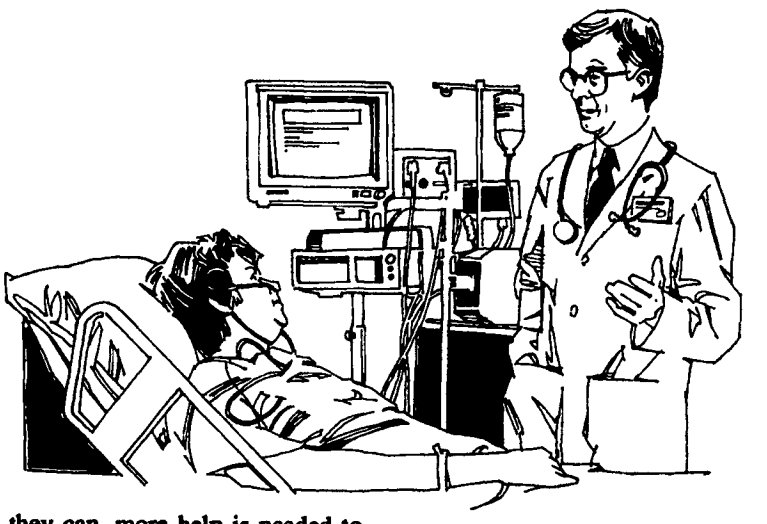
Friends Rally To Help Farm Girl Injured By Hit-And-Run Driver



LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Customers at the Horst Produce Stand along Route 322 between Ephrata and Clay will recall a pretty 17-year-old girl who rang up produce while bantering with customers. Tendrils, which escaped from a mass of brown hair tightly drawn back from her face, accented the merriment in her eyes and the healthy tan achieved from working on the 20 acres of produce grown on the family farm.

But many are unaware that on a snowy night in January, Martha was hit by a hit-and-run driver and hurled 88 feet from the impact.

The night of Jan. 24, Martha had been working in the kitchen at the Horst Auction, a few miles from her home. After cleaning up the kitchen, Martha and a girlfriend left. Generally they rode their bikes home, but because it was snowing, they decided to push them.

A short distance from Martha's home, she was struck by a hit and run vehicle. Amazingly, Martha had no broken bones or external injuries—not even a skull fracture. Instead the injuries were much deeper.

"Doctors said that her brain looks like it's been brush burned and some of the connecting tendrons have been torn loose," Martha's mother said of her namesake.

Exactly how much damage is permanent, only time will determine. Martha lay in a coma in the neuro-trauma unit for two weeks at the Lancaster General Hospital before being transferred to the critical care unit. Recently, Martha was transferred to the rehabilitation unit.

At this point, the family isn't sure how much Martha understands.

"Some days she seems alert and smiles a lot, but the next time she doesn't respond," her mother said.

The day this article was written the family was delighted by an incident that had happened the day before.

While an older sister was helping put a housecoat on Martha, she leaned forward. The sister jumped in fear that Martha was going to bite her (a behavior that she exhibits sometimes since the accident). Instead, Martha kissed her sister on the shoulder.

"Then Martha laughed and laughed so hard her whole body shook," her mother said. "That was the first time that she laughed like that."

Also, for the first time on Tuesday, Martha was fed a few spoonsful of food.

"Doctors were amazed that she swallowed it because she still has a trac tube in," her mom said.

Doctors tell the family not to expect too rapid an improvement. They say it will be at least a year or more of rehabilitation.

Aware of this, the family said that they will not plant as much acreage in produce this year.

"We only want to put out as much as we can take care of ourselves. We don't want the neighbors to help because they have their own work to do," her mother said.

Because the family are conservative Mennonites who use horse and buggy transportation, they need to rely on transportation to the hospital located about 20 miles from their home. Every day, the parents and some of the children have been able to go to the hospital.

The Horsts have three married children. At home are Nelson, 21; Curvin, 15; Arlene, 13; Eugene, 11, Dorothy, 7, and Sharon, 2. Another daughter died in a farm accident several years ago.

"We are really grateful to the many people who have been providing meals for our six children at home, transportation to the hospital, and encouragement," the mother said.

The family has no insurance coverage. Although their church and they themselves will pay what they can, more help is needed to meet the astronomical expenses.

A concerned family friend, Delma Layton of Lititz, has set up an expense fund for Martha. Donations may be made to the Martha Horst Rehabilitation Fund at Ephrata National Bank, Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522 or dropped off at the Horst Auction Center along Route 322, Ephrata.

In addition, several fund raisers are planned. A Bluegrass Benefit Show is planned by Jim Good, a blue grass promoter, to be held on April 4, at the Horst Auction Center. Bluegrass performers will include the Keystone Bluegrass, Penn-Del Mountain Boys, New Found Grass, and a special appearance from the Larkin Family from Tenn.

Doors will open at 5 p.m. and the show will begin at 6 p.m. Tickets sold at the door are $10 for adults, 6-12 years are $5, and under 6 years are free. The entire price at the door will be given toward the hospital bills.

For more information, call Jim Good (717) 738-0379.

Profits from the food concession stand operated by Edna Martin during the blue grass show will also be donated to Martha's fund.

A benefit soup and sub sale will be held at the Mt. Airy Fire Hall on March 6 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on March 7, from 8 a.m. to noon.

Cards may be sent to Martha in care of her parents at 2011 W. Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522.

Trees and Shrubs for the Landscape

Famous plantsman J.C. Raulston, decried the overuse of certain plants, recommending diversity. If you plan to add trees or shrubs to your property this year, consider using trees that are not over-planted. Scotch Pine and Austrian Pine trees are over-planted and dying to diseases on these two-needle pines.

Here are some great substitutes to replace some of our more common species suggested by Master Gardener Joe Volk from Berks County.

The limber pine, Pinus flexilos, was one of the professor's favorite pine. It is a tough tree, hardy, and as its name implies, you can almost tie a knot in its branches. When wet snow builds up, breaking branches of other trees, a Limber pine branch just dips downward, dumping the snow.

Two cultivars, 'Vanderwolf's Pyramid' and 'Glauca', both are really out-standing. Another attractive feature of Limber pine is the fuzzy formation of needles on the trunk, which you could almost mistake for a witch's broom.

Chamaecyparis nootkatensis: Alaska Cedar somewhat resembles the arborvitae and is particularly good planted near water or a moist area. 'Green Arrow' is an extremely narrow cultivar which provides a tall narrow accent plant for the garden.

Sciadopitys verticillata: The Umbrella Pine is not actually in the Pinus family. The needles are thicker and form whorls like the ribs of an umbrella.

Abies nordmanniana: Nordmann Fir is attractive, grows big, and unlike most firs, does well in this area. Abies concolor (Concolor Fir) and Abies koreana (Korean Fir) also do well. Abies koreana 'Horstmans Silberlocke' may be the most unique fir of all. The needles, instead of being straight like other firs and spruces, form a round coil with the pale blue underside exposed.

Picea omorika: The Siberian Spruce maybe the most handsome of all the spruces. Try the cultivar 'Pendula.' Its only drawback is its slow growing. In some locations this could be an advantage.

Other favorite landscape plants include the Weeping White Pine and the Curly-Needled White Pine (Pinus Strobus). When White Pines are afflicted with tip blight, you have to cut off the tip and tie a branch upward to form a new tip.

'Jeddeloh' is a favorite hemlock. It naturally looks like it was 'cloud-pruned.' 'Coles Prostrate' lies flat on the ground and is really striking but needs part shade. One of the most beautiful evergreens, the Weeping Hemlock, grows into a giant, green waterfall.

Although a Hemlock tree in nature is frequently an understory tree, it grows three times faster and thicker in full sun if well watered and mulched.

Select Toys For Learning

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — Toys are more than just fun for children. They are the tools for learning. Through toys, children learn about their world, themselves, and others. When children play with toys they build muscles and the skills to control their bodies, thinking skills, communication skills and they learn how to relate to others.

The foundation of all learning in math, reading and mathematics comes from play. Here are a few ways that toys are helping your child to grow and develop.

- When your child plays with blocks, your child is learning to figure out how things of different sizes and shapes can fit together. This is very good for developing later math skills.
- When your child plays with a pop-up toy he figures out how things work and learns about cause and effect. He develops thinking skills.
- When your child plays ball, she builds muscle control and strength.
- When your child pretends to be a grown-up, he learns to cooperate with others. He builds imagination, creativity, and problem solving skills.
- When your child draws with crayons, she develops hand muscles needed for learning to write.

Remember that good toys are not necessarily expensive, and children do not need very many.

It's better to have a few toys that are really appropriate for your child than lots of toys.

SUPERHERO PLAY

Remember as a kid how much fun it was to pretend to be a superhero, and be powerful enough to do anything that you wanted to do?

When children begin pretending to be superheroes, adults are worried that accidents will happen. Sometimes this play gets out of hand and someone gets hurt. What should a parent do?

Keep in mind that this type of play gives children the chance to feel powerful and show off their new physical abilities. Superhero play can help children feel strong and capable in their real life as well as in their pretend play.

At the same time, children are learning a very negative message — to use violence to solve problems. When carefully supervised by adults, "superhero play" can help children improve their language skills, encourage creativity and teach them to work together to solve problems. When children begin pretending they are superheroes, parents can help them make the most of it.

Make it clear that physical aggression is not acceptable. Encourage children to talk to each other when a play problem happens. This helps preschoolers learn to use words rather than fists to solve a problem.

Suggest ways that superheroes can be helpful that don't involve fighting bad guys. Superheroes can make use of their superpowers by rescuing cats from trees, taking sick babies to the hospital and saving houses from fires. Superheroes are not "super" just because they are strong, but because they can be kind and helpful.

Point out the difference between movies, television and real life. When you see actors pretend to fly from the top of buildings or jump up after being hit by a car, explain to your child that this is just pretend and that in real life people who do heroic acts rely on their own strength and wisdom.

COMPUTER PLAY AND YOUNG CHILDREN: WHAT PARENTS SHOULD KNOW

Over the last 10 years computers have changed life in America.

Computers will become increasingly important in the lives of our children. Today, many parents are confused about computers and their children. Some want to expose their children to computer play to help them to learn about computers. Others are fearful that this exposure could harm their children's development.

Carefully supervise the use of the computer by young children. Parents must carefully select computer software and must monitor closely children who have access to the Internet. In order for the computer to be valuable and not harmful to young children, parents need to monitor the quality of the experience and the amount of time children are spending.

SELECTING QUALITY COMPUTER SOFTWARE FOR YOUNG CHILDREN

Quality software is designed so that children will be active rather than passive users. Rather than just simply being a worksheet requiring memorizing, good software for children challenges them to think for themselves.

Software uses pictures and spoken instructions rather than written ones so that children can do things for themselves.

The Word On Dietary Supplements

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) – Some things just don't make sense. For example, take health claims on food products versus supplements. It takes years for the Drug Administration to make a health claim on a food product, such as high-fiber on oatmeal packaging. But, grind up the oatmeal and sell it in pill form, and you can make a claim based on a single study – even a flawed one – with no pre-approval needed from the FDA.

Because of this, four scientific associations of food and nutrition professionals recently joined forces to urge the public to beware of fraudulent claims when purchasing dietary supplements. Vitamins, minerals, fiber, amino acids phytochemicals, herbal products, and botanicals all are considered dietary supplements. The Food and Nutrition Science Alliance makes these recommendations for consumers:

1) When buying dietary supplements, "If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is not true." Although federal regulations on dietary supplements require that statements on products be "truthful not misleading," there is no standard for the acceptability of the supporting science. Therefore, claims may based on single studies having inadequate or flawed science.

2) Among dietary supplements, less is known about herbals and botanicals than about vitamins and minerals. There are no federal standards for herbals and botanicals to ensure their safety, purity, or quality.

3) Multivitamins in moderation may help some people. High doses of some supplements can be harmful. Scientists agree that a daily multi-vitamin may help some people meet their nutritional needs. Included in this group are pregnant women, children, the elderly and individuals with certain diseases. However, more is not necessarily better Any biologically active ingredient consumed in excess can be harmful. Examples of vitamins and minerals known to be harmful when consumed in excess include vitamin A, niacin, vitamin B6, vitamin D, iron and folic acid. Examples of herbals and botanicals known to cause harm if taken in high doses include ma haung, guar gum, willow bark, comfrey and chaparral.

4) "Natural" is not synonymous with "safe". As with all chemicals, nutrients and plant extracts taken in high enough doses for long enough periods can be toxic. At this time, too, few herbal products bear contraindications on their labels to warn consumers of potential ill effects.

5) For good health, eat a variety of foods. Supplements may help in some cases, but they lack other components of food that may be beneficial and are no substitute for the good nutrition obtained from eating a variety of foods.

Over-The Counter Herbal Remedies

1) Do not assume that herbal remedies are safe simply because they are natural. Herbal remedies contain substances that can have powerful effects upon the mind and/or body. Use even greater cautions than when taking standard medications.

2) Be cautious about taking medicinal herbs if you are pregnant or attempting to become pregnant.

3) Be cautious about taking medicinal herbs if you are breast feeding a baby; herbal drugs in the body can be transferred to breast milk.

4) Do not give herbs to infants or children.

5) Do not take large quantities of any herbal preparation.

6) Do not take any medicinal herb on a prolong daily basis.

7) Buy only preparations that identify plants on the label and state contraindications for use

8) Become familiar with the names of potentially dangerous herbs and be cautious about their use.

9) If you are taking medications, do not use medicinal herbs without checking with your doctor.

10) Do not trust your health to unqualified practitioners who use unregulated titles such as "herbalist," "herb doctor," "Master Herbalist," "herbologist," "Natural Health Counselor."

11) Beware of exaggerated claims for the benefits of herbal remedies.

12) Insist that herbal marketers meet basic consumer protection standards of labeling, safety and efficacy.

Pre-planning Eases Hectic Schedules

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co) – A busy schedule and healthy eating is often difficult to manage, but some pre-planning can help.

When you give someone a job, you may find yourself expecting it to be done to your exact specifications. Don't make that mistake.

Maybe you're used to folding your towels neatly in threes and you like them that way. But after all, though they aren't folded as neatly, they fit in the closet and are out of the way. Let the persons responsible decide how the job should be done. Don't expect perfection. They're helping in their own way, and their standards will improve over time.

SHARING THE LOAD

If you're organized and know what you're serving for supper ahead of time, chances are that others can help you get the meal on the table. If a casserole needs to be put in the oven before you arrive home and if someone is around to do it, let that person know where it is, what to do, and how to do it.

Spend a few minutes in the morning getting the casserole together, so that Johnny can take it off the refrigerator shelf, remove the cover, put it in the oven, and turn on the oven to 350° at 4:25. This kind of planning works like a charm. It also gives you a chance to serve recipes that take longer to cook.

WHAT'S FOR SUPPER

Planning your meals for the entire week can be a real time-saver. But it is also an opportunity to plan for our family's nutritional needs. To maintain good health and well-being, it's important to eat a variety of foods to get the right balance of protein, vitamins, minerals, fiber, and energy. Every day we need foods from the following food groups:

Breads, cereals, rice, and pasta: 6 to 11 servings

Meats, poultry, fish, eggs, beans, and nuts: 2 to 3 servings

Fruits: 2 to 4 servings

Vegetables: 3 to 5 servings

Milk, cheese, and milk products: 2 to 3 servings.

Start by planning your suppers and weekend meals to make sure they're well balanced. For variety in your meals, sit down with one of your children and let him or her suggest three or four main-dish favorites for the week. (You may need to dispel the idea that you'll accept expensive suggestions, such as shrimp or live lobster.) Then ask another family member to help the following week. Don't forget to include yourself in the rotation.

Once the main dishes are selected, build the meal around them. Include at least two vegetables and a fruit, in case non of your family had any servings from the fruit and vegetable group for lunch.

You can check your children's school lunch menu to see what they had, but there's no guarantee they ate fruits and vegetables. Checking that menu, however, will help you avoid the discovery, as you sit down to eat, that dinner is what they had for lunch.

A variety of fruits and vegetables ensures that your family's nutritional requirements will be met. Include one rich source of Vitamin C every day and one of Vitamin A every other day. Vitamin C helps your body resist infections and heal wounds. Vitamin A helps keep you body looking healthy and your skin smooth; it also helps young people grow.

Good sources of Vitamin A are: live, dark leafy greens (spinach), carrots, sweet potatoes, apricots, cantaloupe, watermelon, broccoli, pumpkins, and winter squash.

Once you've included the main dish and the majority of fruits and vegetables needed for the day, the rest is easy. Add a serving or two of bread and a glass of milk.

Add that to a quick-and-easy breakfast of cereal, milk, and a fruit, and you have done as much as you can to provide a well-balanced diet for your family. Nutritious snacks such as fresh fruits and vegetables, peanut butter and crackers, and milk help round out the diet.

Save snacks high in sugar, fat, and salt for special occasions. It's best not to eat them on a daily basis.

BARBECUED BEEF

(Serves 4)

1 pound lean ground beef
1 large onion, diced
2 stalks celery, diced
1 1/2 cups catsup
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
Pepper to taste.

Brown ground beef, onion and celery. Add remaining ingredients. Let simmer on low heat 20 to 30 minutes. Serve on hamburger buns or rolls.

Try this menu for supper: Barbecued Beef on Roll, Sweet Corn, Cole Slaw, milk and Peaches.

Softened Water Causes Hard Times For Indoor Plants

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – If your indoor plants or plants brought in for the winter seem to be faring poorly, a Penn State horticulture expert suggests taking a hard look at softened water as the culprit.

"There isn't any research that tells us which plants can be injured, but plants do have a widely varying tolerance for softened water," says J. Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture, in the College of Agricultural Sciences. "In many cases, water from a mechanical softener has a harmful effect on plant growth."

Nuss explains that hard water contains large amounts of calcium and magnesium, which are plant nutrients. However, these minerals reduce the lathering effectiveness of soap when clothing or other items are washed. "The minerals in hard water often combine with soap to form the ring you see in bathtubs or wash bowls," he says.

Many homeowners soften their water by using a filtration system to exchange the calcium and magnesium in the water for sodium, creating a softer water that allows soap to function better.

"Sodium is used by plants only in very small amounts," Nuss says. "Over long period of time, sodium becomes toxic to plants."

Nuss says excess sodium will damage the soil quality around the plant's root system by breaking down the soil structure, thus reducing drainage. Nuss says savvy plant lovers can save their plants by using several care methods.

• Leaching. By using rainwater or unsoftened water to water your plants, high levels of sodium can be leached out of the soil.

• Elevation. By placing your plant on gravel or a similar material, a reservoir is formed to collect water passing through the soil. "Never allow plants to stand in softened water," Nuss warns.

• Repotting. Fresh potting soil will provide a new environment for the roots, free of excess salts.

Other water additives used by municipal water systems, chlorine and fluorine, also can harm some plants. Nuss says they are trace elements that are needed in very small amounts to keep plants healthy. "In excess, like sodium, they can be toxic," he says.

Chlorine generally presents less of a headache for houseplants, Nuss explains. "Chlorine can be eliminated from water by heating, aeration or by filling watering containers and letting them stand overnight before watering the plants."

Fluorine can adversely affect plants at concentrations as low as .1 part per million. In some municipal water supplies, 10 times that mount is added to prevent tooth decay." A top indicator of fluoride content is the spider plant, or Chlorophytum, which will show spotted leaves or burned tips," Nuss says.

Houseplant gardeners can deter the effects of fluorine by adding two teaspoons of limestone per six-inch pot of soil. the addition of lime raises the pH of the soil and combines with fluoride in a form that plants cannot use, according to Nuss.

Pony Drill Team Needs Money, Will Travel

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The Chincoteague Pony Drill Team, the only one of its kind in the world, has been invited to perform at Equitana USA, in Louisville, Kentucky, in June of 1998.

The drill team, consisting of eight youth between 12 and 20 years of age, each riding a Chincoteague pony in precision formations, set to music, had its premiere performance last year, and was well received by its audiences. To many people, it is their first experience seeing Chincoteague ponies away from the island, full grown and saddle broke, and it is a joy to see the ponies in action.

"It will cost the team close to $8,000 to take the eight ponies down to Kentucky and perform there," organizer and team coach Kandy Allen noted. "Right now our focus is two fold. First we want to be able to put on the best possible show we can. Two, we have to raise the funds to get there."

Equitana USA, the World's Fair of Equestrian Sports will be held at the Kentucky Fair And Expo Center, Louisville, Kentucky. Last year about 50,000 people from 13 countries attended. This is the first time that the Chincoteague pony will be represented at the Fair.

The Allens are owners of Misty II, granddaughter of Misty, and several other descendents of Misty of Chincoteague, the pony make famous by the book by author Marguerite Henry. Several Misty ponies are used in the drill team.

"What we need now is support for the team" Allen noted. "The kids are asking for supporters to send donations for the trip to Kentucky. Whether it be a small donation from an individual or a larger one from a company, all will be welcomed by the girls."

To send a donation for the trip, address your contribution to The Chincoteague Pony Drill Team, c/o Treasurer Bev Bender, 2968 Shumaker Rd., Manheim, PA 17545.

For more information about the drill team or Chincoteague ponies, contact Kendy Allen at (717) 665-7144.

FFA Train To Conduct Partners For A Safer Community

From left, Carolyn Howard, Kerry Hoffman, and Cynthia Shaffer participate in the state trainers' workshop for Partners for a Safer Community, held in Atlanta, Ga.

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Cynthia Shaffer, West Snyder FFA advisor, Carolyn Howard, a ninth grade student and a West Snyder FFA member, and Kerry Hoffman of Penn State University were selected by the National FFA Foundation to participate in the first national workshop for state trainers of "Partners for a Safer Community" in Atlanta, Georgia on January 23-24.

As a special project of the National FFA Foundation, Partners for a Safer Community is a national collaborative effort to promote agricultural youth safety and health through education, community development and youth leadership. To help accomplish this goal, the group has compiled an instructional package and youth safety program model for use by community leaders.

The National FFA Foundation selected one FFA advisor, one FFA member, and one safety-interested community leader per state to attend the workshop to understand the Partners for a Safer Community model and prepare to train interested community groups throughout the state upon returning home.

"Partners for a Safer Community is an excellent avenue to promote agricultural safety issues," says Mrs. Shaffer. "We plan to pilot the program on the local level because I want to see for myself how this program works before we conduct a state workshop in October. There is so much educational information on safety already available and this program will put it in the hands of educators and community leaders."

"Several hundred adolescents die from agriculture-related injuries each year and more than 22,000 are seriously hurt." said Julie Sesisons, Partners for a Safer Community project director. "We believe establishing Partners for a Safer Community programs nationwide that promote safety education and youth leadership will play an important role in deterring these unintentional deaths and injuries in the future "

Major sponsors of Partners for a Safer Community are John Deere, Lorsband 15G, Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc and WK Kellogg Foundation Contributing sponsored include the Equipment Manufacturers Institute, New Holland, Phil-lips Petroleum company and Soybean Digest/Helping Hand Club.

Program collaborators inc-lude Farm Safety 4 Just Kids, National Association of Agricul-tural Educators, National Farm Medicine Center, National FFA Organization, National FFA Foundation, Inc., National FFA Alumni Association, Inc., Na-tional Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, National Council for Agricultural Educa-tion, NYFEA – The Association for Education Agricultural Leaders, Teaching Agricultural Safety to Kids and Cooperation Extension System.

A FORCE Field Takes Corn To A New Level.

No other corn insecticide controls tough insect pests like rootworms, cutworms, wireworms and white grubs better than FORCE® insecticide. But that's just one reason why farmers who've experienced a FORCE Field of protection™ in no-till, minimum till and conventional tillage systems stick with it year after year.

The other big reason is that FORCE is safe to birds, earthworms and you. Our 3G formulation lets you handle half as much FORCE as other insecticides. To save you time, money and cut your insecticide exposure in half.

The newer pyrethroid chemistry of FORCE gives you better [illegible] than other pyrethroid insecticides. And FORCE doesn't interact [illegible]

Free Food For All Dairy Farmers

It Wasn't Raining When Noah Built His Ark...

But I bet he was glad he built it when that big rain came. Plan ahead. Keep Vitamix on hand. You will be glad you did; the first time your cow or calf gets symptoms of a contagious disease or infection.

Use Vitamix For...

*Cows after calving.
*Every virus.
*Every infection.
*Every contagious disease.
*Mastitis & Scours.
*When your cow or calf is off feed.
*Vitamix is for every dairyman who wants to stay in business.
*Vitamix costs less than antibiotics.
*Vitamix is all natural.
*Vitamix is faster than antibiotics.
*Vitamix is free from side effects.
*Vitamix is for anything one animal can catch from another.

You can use Vitamix if you have already used antibiotics and sulfa drugs; but antibiotics and sulfa drugs damage the immune system and it takes longer for your cows and calves to recover if you used antibiotics first.

You can sell the milk when you use Vitamix.

Do you remember when you raised 100 calves without losing a calf? If you are too young to remember that, ask a dairyman over 50 years old. Remember when staff mastitis and a lot of the common diseases of today were practically unheard of? Ask a Dairyman over 50 years old. All that was before the routine use of antibiotics. Use of antibiotics is like a revolving door; treating for the symptoms of another treatment. Get off the medical merry go round. Keep some Vitamix on hand.

One gallon of Vitamix is typically enough for about 60 cases of calf scours and it costs only $60.00 (when you get it by the five gallon bucket).

One gallon of Vitamix is typically enough for about 8 cases of mastitis. ($7.50 per cow). You save five days milk when you use Vitamix instead of antibiotics. Save about $40.00 per each case!!!

Vitamix is made by the same people who make Formula M.

VITAMIX, when you need a miracle!!!.

Beef Producers To Address 'Mad Cow' Disease

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A representative of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association in Washington, D.C., will lecture on bovine spongiform encelopathy (BSE) and E. coli 0157: H7 at the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's College meeting, Feb. 28 at the Holiday Inn at the Meadowlands in Canonsburg.

Gary Weber, a scientist on staff at the association, will address how BSE, commonly called "mad cow disease," affects the beef industry as well as how E. coli 0157: H7 infections impact the ground beef industry.

Sponsored by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, and Pfizer Animal Health, the meeting also will offer a special program on parasite and fly control in cow herds.

Dwight Hess, a feeder cattle producer in Lancaster County, will speak on how to make correct decisions about when and what type of cattle to buy when buying feeder cattle. Hess purchases about 1,000 feeder cattle every year.

John Comerford, associate professor of dairy and animal science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, will address how beef producers can analyze costs. "As we work harder for every dollar of profit in the beef industry, we have to start identifying ways to reduce costs in order to offset price reductions," Comerford said.

Lowell Wilson, Penn State professor of animal science, will give a talk on the safe and effective use of growth-promoting implants, which can be a very cost-effective management tool for beef producers.

In adtition, representatives of the Pennsylvania Beef Council and the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association will outline current state and national programs for beef producers.

The registration fee for the meeting is $25, which includes breaks, meals, and materials. For more information or for registration forms, call the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association at (814) 692-4208 or John Comerford at (814) 863-3661.

Master Gardeners Certified

WESTMINSTER, Md. — The Carroll County Extension office has announced the certification of two new master gardeners.

Mary Decker of Westminster and Patrece Bennett of Uniontown have completed the 30-hour master gardener training as well as a minimum of 30 hours of volunteer service to the Carroll County Community in record time.

Having completed the classwork only last September, both have logged more than 40 hours of volunteer time since then. Master gardener volunteers staff information tables, work in the demonstration garden, give talks on topics related to gardening, write the newsletter, and provide support to the Carroll County Cooperative Extension Home Horticulture Department.

This year's Master Gardener training will run from Oct. 5 - Oct. 9, inclusive. For more information, call Lisa Spence on Mondays or Thursdays, (410) 848-4611.

Hereford Association Initiates Feedlot and Carcass Test

KANSAS CITY, Mo. – The American Hereford Association (AHA) will launch a major, comprehensive feedlot and carcass test this spring to gather specific date and information on Hereford sires.

According to Lovell Kuykendall, AHA's director of commercial cattle programs, the association is lining up commercial test herds, registered test sires, and reference sires.

"More accurate information on herd sires will stratify bulls on feedlot performance and carcass merit," he said. "This new program will allow breeders to select for the specific traits they need such as ribeye area, fat thickness, quality grade, feed efficiency and conversion, average daily gain, and cost of grain."

Test sires will be tied throughout the program by using reference sires in every commercial test herd. The following year, test sires will be used as references to tie test years together, thus giving a complete picture of the hereford breed's strengths and qualities. Ultrasound data will continue to add to the data base, and both live and ultrasound information will be used to calculate EPDs.

"We believe this kind of structure will give us the soundest means of providing accurate carcass EPDs," Kuykendall said. "When we hang them up and measure them, there's no question about the accuracy. The information gathered will in turn enhance the success of the AHA's Certified Hereford Beef® program."

Full details about costs, selection, and calf management and ownership are available by contacting Kuykendall at the AHA, P.O. Box 014059, Kansas City, MO 64101, (816)842-3757.

BELARUS VALUE. IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

Introducing two big changes in how small jobs get done. The 8011L and 9011L offer a low clearance design and tight turning radius that provide even higher levels of maneuverability. Yet they still manage to offer the same durability, value and affordability you expect from Belarus.

Choose from the 8011L and its tough 81 hp four cylinder water cooled engine or the 9011L's turbo charged 98 hp. Both engines have strong torque characteristics. Add it all up and you've got utility tractors ideal for every type of operation from orchards and vineyards to poultry operations and grounds maintenance.

But the exceptional value doesn't stop there. The 8011L and 9011L offer excellent lift capacity for front end loader applications. Other impressive features include power assisted steering and a fully adjustable seat for operator comfort and convenience.

Combined with their ease of maintenance and servicing, it's not hard to see how Belarus makes even the smallest jobs easier in a big way. That's Belarus value.

Tucker Family Farms: Marketing A Program That Works

AMHERST, Va. — Deep in the heart of the Virginia Blue Ridge Mountains, Bill Tucker and his family are the first of seven generations to make their living solely from cattle. Other Tucker generations tended apple orchards and tobacco, but after Bill was graduated from Virginia Tech in 1983, he looked to the farm's base herd of commercial Hereford and Angus and saw his future among them.

"Breeding cows and seeing the genetic line through to the end is a dream of mine," said Bill. With the blessing of his father, Thomas, Bill began to seriously improve his herd genetically.

During the late '70s and early '80s, the Gelbvieh breed was generating favorable data on growth and maternal traits at the Meat Animal Research Center in Clay Center, Neb., which really caught the attention of Tucker. After studying the breed, Tucker decided to utilize Gelbvieh genetics due to their early puberty, fertility, growth, and high maternal traits. Tucker always believed the fertility of the female was the backbone of a good cow-calf operation and his research showed that Gelbvieh cattle excel in fertility.

The first Gelbvieh bull Tucker used was Garst N3591 our of LNR Minnesota Magnum. This bull had a major influence on his herd and turned out to be "one whale of a bull for growth and carcass traits." Early A.I. sires included Sherman, Day One, JR and Hockeye. The Virginian line from Knoll Crest Farm in Virginia also shows heavily in Tucker's herd. He became friends with Paul Bennett from Knoll Crest in college and that friendship has lasted through the years and allows both of them to be honest with each other and open to constructive criticism which helps both of their breeding programs.

At this time, the Tucker herd consists of Gelbvieh-Angus crosses. These females can be mated to any growth bull to produce an animal with a good carcass. These animals are easy fleshing and produce plenty of milk on fescue pasture, according to Tucker. He uses artificial insemination on his heifers and synchronizes them for better conception. He likes his heifers calving within a 35-day period. He has about 175 brood cows calving in the fall and 125 calving in the spring. Background cattle and fed steers and heifers in development bring his total cattle inventory to about 750 head.

Tucker prefers the fall calving season because he has more marketing options with the fall calves. He definitely has an advantage with A.I. on the heifers he will be retaining.

The main objective of Tucker Family Farms is to supply quality replacement heifers for commercial cattle producers. He markets these heifers as "Target 2000" replacement heifers. Tucker requires his heifers to have performance genetics, high fertility, good carcass quality, and to be able to withstand environmental pressure.

The heifers are on a strict health and vaccination program, in addition to being calfhood vaccinated and tested for tuberculosis. He markets only bred heifers because he does not want any customer to be disappointed just because they used the wrong bull. He sells the complete package and many of his buyers become contract growers.

In fact, Tucker meet his wife, Claudia, after she purchased some bred heifers from him and became a contract grower. She was producing some really exceptional calves and, Tucker noted, "The only way I could get the cows back was to marry her."

He buys the calves back from his contract growers at a premium with no discount on color. He pays 4 cents over market price for the heifers and 2 cents over the market for steers. By retaining the top 10 percent of the heifer crop, Tucker is able to select the best from a genetic pool of 500 cows instead of the 300 brood cows actually on the Tucker Farm. The bulk of his buyers are in Virginia, but he has customers in all the surrounding states. North Carolina, especially the eastern hog/cattle farmer, is his fastest growing market for bred replacement heifers.

The steer siblings are backgrounded at his farm and then sent to western feedlots. Tucker believes in collecting carcass data and the Gelbvieh Alliance Marketing Grid provides just what Tucker needs to evaluate the finished product of his genetic program. The Gelbvieh Alliance, which is managed by the American Gelbvieh Association, is already rewarding cattle producers for superior carcasses in addition to supplying feedlot and carcass data back to the producers. Tucker predicts that color may not mean anything in the future, but carcass merit and uniformity of carcass quality are what will determine premium prices.

Tucker sees the Gelbvieh Alliance as being one way commercial cattle producers can get a handle on their product. "It is a real advantage to know what you are producing whether it is good or bad," said Tucker. He also sees an advantage in tracking the carcass merit quality of certain bulls.

Last year, Tucker sent every male calf from his fall calf crop to be fed out at South Central Feedlot in Nebraska through the Gelbvieh Alliance. His calves gained 3.84 pounds per day, 60 percent of them graded Choice with an average Yield Grade 2.1 and he was paid a premium for both grade and superior cutability. Tucker was very happy with his results on the Alliance Marketing Grid, but hopes to increase the marbling in his cattle without losing the growth through a combination of feed management and genetics.

Tucker explains that in the beef business there are three dichotomies. The first is birth weight and yearling growth and animals that combine these two opposing traits are what he looks for. The second is marbling/quality grade and growth rate. Tucker says cattle with extremely high growth rates may not be efficient in carcass quality and once again, Tucker tries to select those animals that add quality to the carcass in an efficient manner.

The third dichotomy is feedlot efficiency on a high-grain diet compared to forage efficiency and here again, Tucker concentrates on finding the animals that perform in the feedlot and on forages. He carries out the goal of the commercial cattle producer, which is to produce a high quality product in the most efficient fashion from the lowest cost residual feed.

Tucker plans to continue marketing his steers through the Gelbvieh Alliance since he wants to identify those superior genetics and continue to make his product even better. Bill and Claudia have three daughters: Taylor, Ruth and Avery, and perhaps in a few years they will be interested in showing steers and heifers. Right now, however, Tucker said the whole family is content to just show up at the bank to make payments. And through his structured crossbreeding program utilizing Gelbvieh genetics, Tucker and his family are able to do just that.

Alternative Agriculture Workshop Set

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — On Saturday, March 14, Wayne County Cooperative Extension will be co-hosting an all-day workshop called "Agricultural Alternatives" at the Honesdale High School.

This educational workshop is for farmers, landowners, and entrepreneurs interested in exploring alternative agricultural enterprises for their land and farms.

Speakers will address topics such as small business development, agritourism, alternative livestock and crops, as well as setting up food processing businesses.

The event is a collaborative effort between Penn State Cooperative Extension, the Wayne County Conservation District, Pocono Resource and Conservation District.

The workshop's featured speaker will be Duncan Hilchey, a agricultural development specialist with Cornell Cooperative Extension, who will discuss agritourism opportunities and challenges. Hilchey has written extensively on farm-based recreation businesses, direct marketing, and small-scale food processing enterprises.

His presentation will cover key management issues and concerns in starting and maintaining a successful agritourism enterprise including marketing, safety, insurance, and profitability.

Anyone interested can register for the workshop by contacting the Wayne County Cooperative Extension office at (717) 253-5970. The cost of the workshop is $10 and this includes a buffet lunch and handout materials.

To register by mail, send your name, address, phone number and a check payable to Extension Special Account to Agricultural Alternatives Workshop, Wayne County Cooperative Extension, 925 Court St., Honesdale, PA 18431.

Grazing School Set For March

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Dairy and livestock producers intent on making the conversion to an intensive grazing system on their farm is the focus of a series of workshops offered through Penn State Cooperative Extension in March.

The Southeast Pennsylvania Grazing School will be held March 12, 19, and 26 from 7:30 p.m. - 9 p.m. at the Northern Lebanon High School, Fredericksburg.

The program will be for a small group of producers who want to take the time to think about how they will incorporate grazing on the farm. During the workshop, producers will redesign their farm for grazing using aerial photos and the soil survey maps. At the end of the workshop, producers will walk away with a grazing plan.

The workshop is limited to 20 participants. The registration fee, due March 6, is $20 for the one person from the farm and $10 for each additional person from the farm. The fee includes reference material and refreshments for all three meetings.

For more information, contact Galen Kopp, Penn State Cooperative Extension Office in Lebanon County, 2120 Cornwall Road, Suite 1, Lebanon, PA 17042.

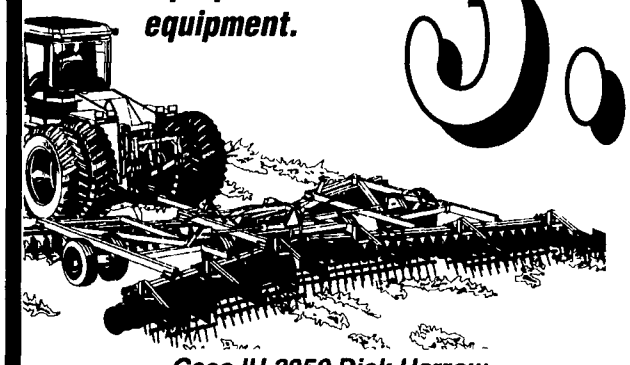
CONSIGNMENT AUCTION
Of Farm Equipment
Saturday, March 28

Case IH is offering low 3.9% financing for 36 months on Case IH planting, seeding and soil preparation equipment.

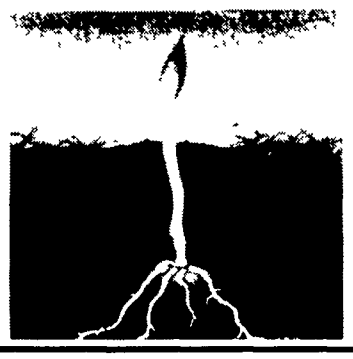
3.9%



Case IH 3950 Disk Harrow
IT LEVELS, LEVELS, LEVELS!

This special offer is good on Case IH Early Riser planters, grain drills, disk harrows, field cultivators and more.

Tillage Practices Change. A Seed's Requirements Do Not.



An Early Riser Planter Is "The Germinator"

Remember. What's most important is the combination of planting to moisture, uniform depth control, seed-to-soil contact, uniform soil pressure, accurate population and seed spacing

Early Riser planter makes a difference.

That means a one- to seven-day faster emergence, a 7 bu per acre average yield advantage in corn

That is real value.

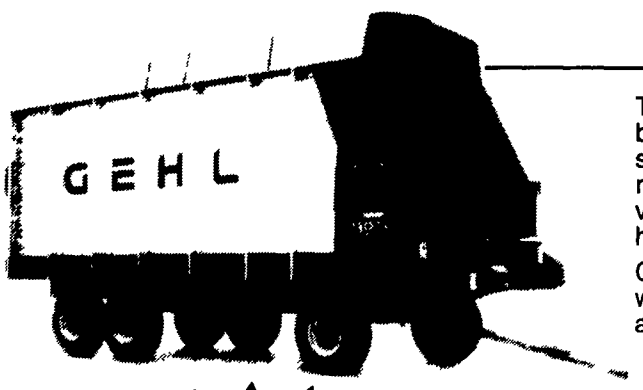
Forage Season Will Soon Be Here!
Order A Forage Box From Binkley & Hurst Today!



America's #1 Forage Box

The Gehl tradition of building the premier forage box is well known. Gehl forage boxes feature a simple design with few moving parts for increased reliability. They do an outstanding job in a wide variety of conditions. They last long and maintain high resale value.

Gehl's newest forage box continues the tradition with added features including: true, infinitely variable-speed drive; improved box roof; improved beater design; an optional 18-inch folding conveyor extension; and improved durability throughout.

This box is loaded with the convenience and performance features you demand for smooth, fast unloading and worry-free reliability.

Compare the performance, compare the convenience, compare the quality and compare the reliability. You'll see that Gehl delivers the best value for your forage box dollar.

NOTE! Gehl Unloading Conveyer Webs Are Stonger Than Some Competitive Brands Which Means Less Down Time In The Field!

THE ROOF, SIDES, ENDGATE AND STAKES ALL HAVE A 10-YEAR RUST-THROUGH WARRANTY

Steel, side stakes, designed as steel 2x4's, are made from 16-gauge aluminized steel The upright stakes are reinforced for heavy-duty performance. Box sides are made from 20-gauge aluminized steel

Improved beater design. Gehl's third beater features extended tines to do an even better job of breaking up clumps to provide smoother crop delivery into the cross conveyor Fewer clumps falling onto the conveyor and into the blower mean reduced unloading time and reduced front end spill-over It also means less horsepower is required to operate the blower One-piece tine rods extend through the beater tube for extra strength and long life

Infinite variable speed drive. Gehl's "Vari-Sweep" system quickly empties the entire box to get you back to the field in a hurry Bed chain speed is infinitely adjustable from 3 7 to 10 66 feet per minute Match unloading speed to crop consistency and blower capacity to maximize efficiency and minimize time spent at the silo The variable speed belt is warranted for five years.

The main drive features extra-strong 50HE chain Other drive areas use 50 chain

Single lever control. A single lever engages the beaters and regulates bed chain speed for simple and total control of the unloading cycle The shift handle is ergonomically designed for comfortable and easy operation

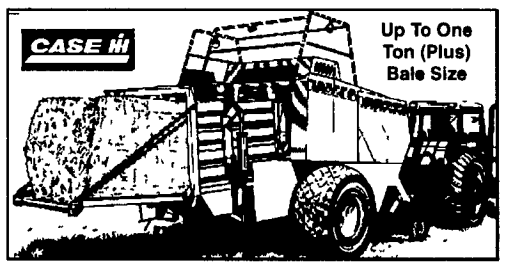
New Case IH 8580 Baler In Stock at Binkley & Hurst Bros. With Service After The Sale!



Case IH 8580 Center-Line Rectangular Baler

The Case International 8580 is designed for commercial producers and large hay operations that have big package needs With a 46 5" x 50 0" (1 18 x 1 27 m) bale chamber, the 8580 can form a bale up to 108" long, weighing up to 2,200 lbs (1000 kg) Just right for efficient handling, stacking and trucking

TOP-END PRODUCTION

The 8580 is no ordinary baler This system is designed for high-capacity hay production The 8580 can pack the equivalent of 20 to 40 conventional rectangular bales into a single package, and is capable of producing over 200 bales a day Also, storage requirements are actually reduced versus the equivalent tonnage of small rectangular bales This size bale is convenient for transport, and handling and stacking these bales is a snap, too They're much more manageable and stack better than round bales that are comparable in weight The best part about the 8580 though, is that it makes high-quality, weather-tight bales You won't find another line of balers that makes better quality hay It all begins with the center-line design— the same concept used on all Case International rectangular balers From the time the crop is swept up by the wide, low-profile pickup until it exits the bale chamber, it moves in a straight line The end product—a uniform bale that cures evenly for high-quality hay

These bales feed better than others do, too Just cut the twine and break off as many flakes as your livestock need Or, they're easily ground or processed for feeding in either dairy or beef operations

QUALITY CONSTRUCTION

We know how critical field performance is to your success reliability is expected when buying any new piece of equipment That's why the 8580 is designed for ease of operation and built to last Its 18,700 lb weight is a testament to the amount of steel that goes into building one Its main frame, axle and hitch are high-strength, welded box-beams constructed to resist the twisting forces of rough terrain It doesn't stop there The massive gearbox transmits high torque loads, and a 460 lb flywheel absorbs and overcomes peak loads for smoother operation And, the 8580 features heavy-duty packer and stuffer fingers, as well as a heavy-duty plunger with a short 30-inch stroke length and 25 4 stroke-per-minute speed for reduced wear while being gentle on tender crops

KRAUSE CONSERVATION TILLAGE

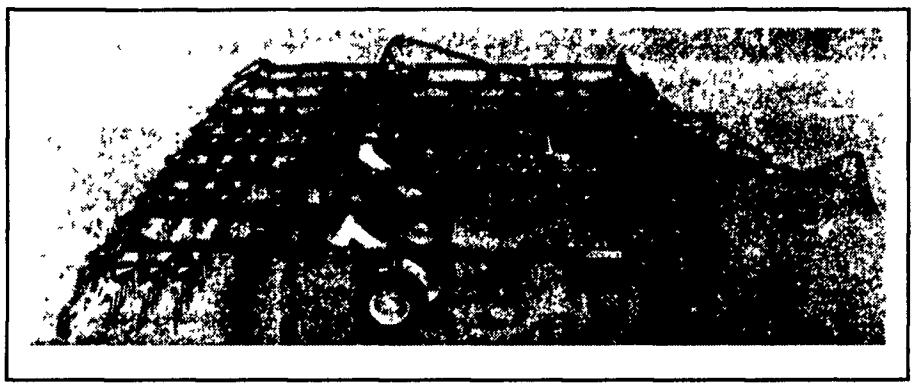
FINISH TILLAGE SYSTEMS

ONE PASS Tillage is REALITY

6150 XT LANDSMAN

Combines Primary & Secondary Tillage with Seedbed Finishing

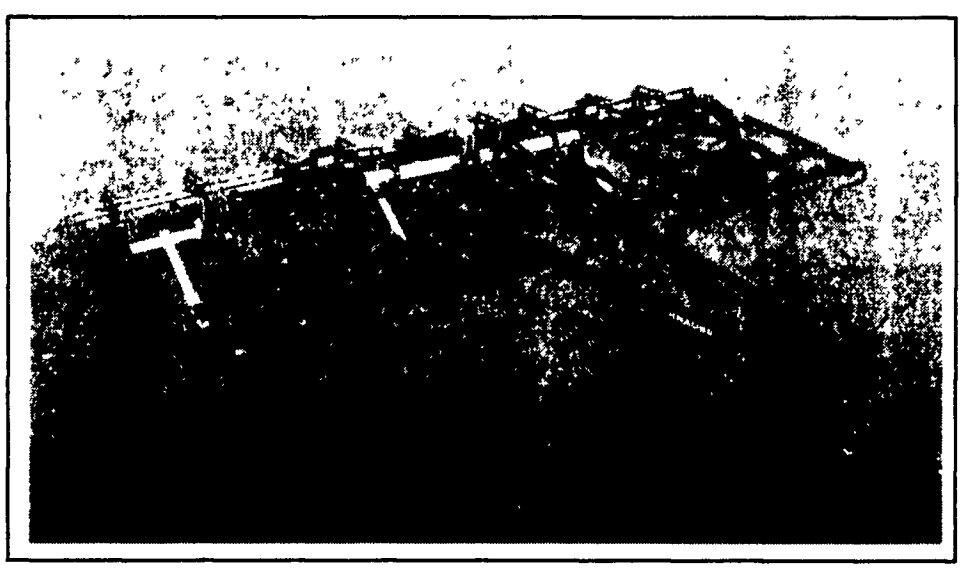
6300 LANDSTAR



Heavy Residue does not stop this Machine

Both Machines feature Krause's "2-Piece K-tine" - 180 pound point load - and/or the XT270 Shank - 270 pound point load - in combinations that till, and level the soil so that you are ready to plant after one pass. The LANDSTAR is designed to handle heavy crop residue without disking or shredding first. The trash moves on through. The secret to the finished seedbed is on the back - combination of rolling baskets and heavy-duty 16" spring tines level the ground and incorporate any trash that's present.

High-Residue FIELD CULTIVATORS



KRAUSE invented HEAVY-DUTY

2-Piece K-Tine provide superior 25" clearance for trash flow.

Self-leveling tongue automatically levels the unit when changing depth.

5 Rows of Shanks - 125" front to back.

The 4200HR Field Cultivator is the Conservation Leader

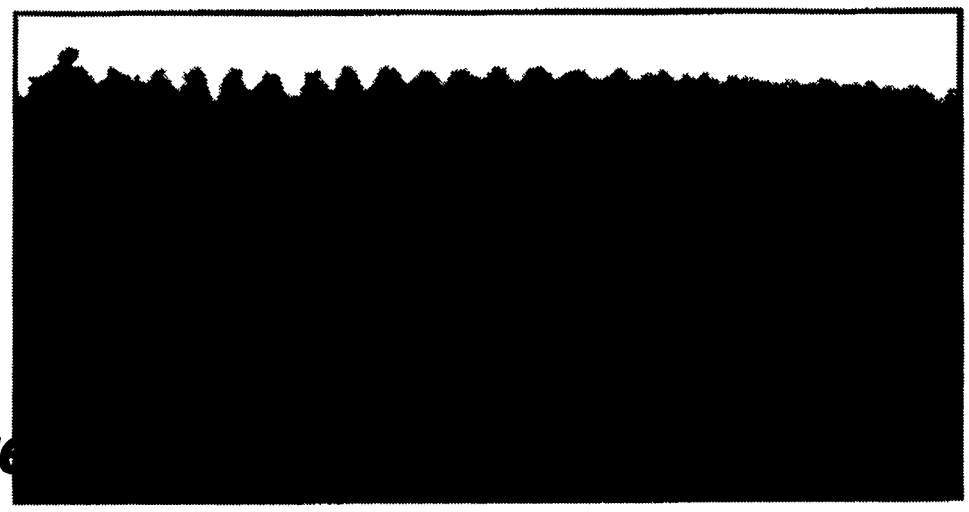
A Product Update From MONSANTO

Master™

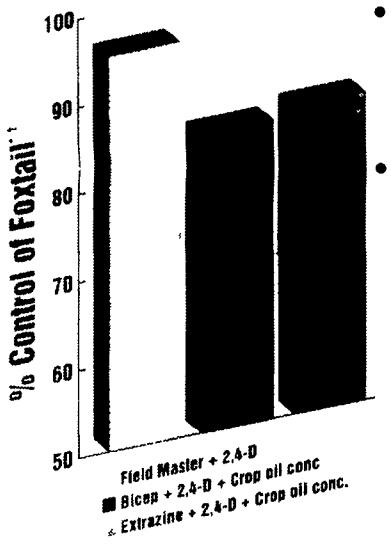
The first complete



Field Master™ herbicide is the first complete corn herbicide that provides both the best burndown plus broad-spectrum, season-long residual control of grasses and broadleaves.

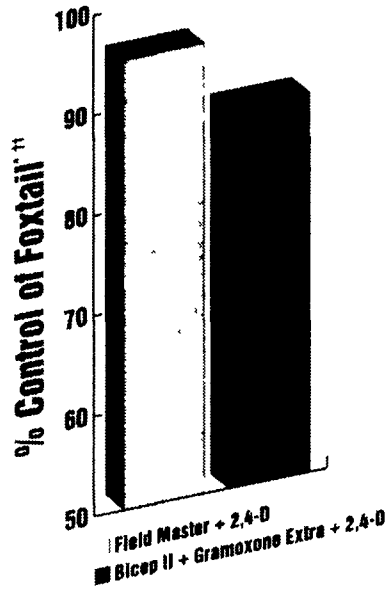
Master GIVES YOU:

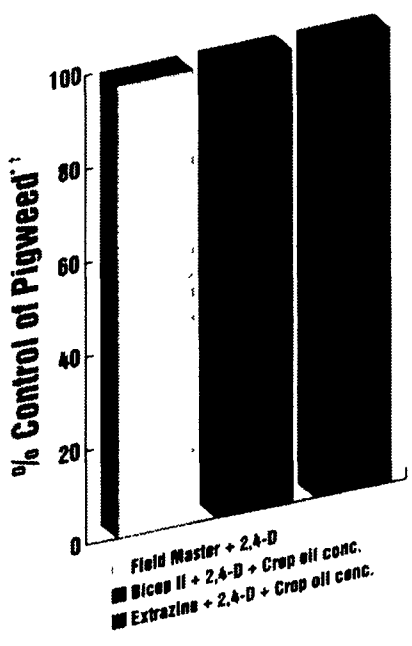
- The powerful combination of burndown and residual control in one herbicide.
- Broad-spectrum, shoots-to-roots burndown of weeds up to six inches tall.
- Control of the broadest spectrum of weeds, plus proven control on the largest number of grasses and broadleaves.



- More complete control of tough grasses and broadleaves compared to Extrazine® and Bicep® II.
- Added convenience. Field Master is complete and premixed, so it requires only one application for minimum-till and no-till fields.

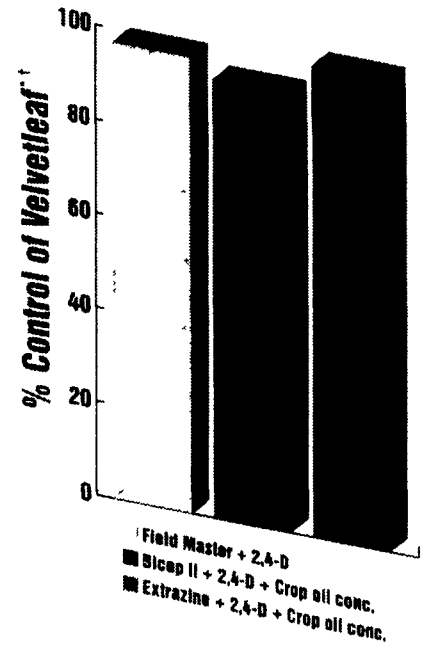
By combining burndown with a residual, Field Master provides lasting control and helps fields start clean and stay clean.





Master FACTS:

- Field Master provides the best burndown.
- Field Master provides the best residual control.
- When a grower switches from Extrazine to Field Master, there's no need to change current management practices.
- Field Master offers burndown performance that Bicep II doesn't have.
- Field Master also provides unmatched residual, broad-spectrum control all season long.



Master™ is designed to give growers better performance in limited tillage operations from no-till to stale seed bed situations, or as an "Aide to Tillage".

"Aide to Tillage"
Large weeds left on the surface or only partially buried after 1 or 2 tillage passes often grow back. These show up as complaints later in the season. Growers, who till ground can utilitze one tillage pass before planting to save time and get back on schedule. FieldMaster will kill the remianing green weeds lying on the surface.

BENEFITS:

- Broad spectrum burndown and residual weed control.
  - Fewer tillage passes –> helps growers get back on planting schedule
  - One product to spray –> treat more acres with less mixing hassles
- Better residual control in a broad range of weather conditions.
- Outstanding crop safety.
- No need for additional surfactants.
- Weed & Feed in one operation.
  Apply in 10 to 50 gallons/acre 28%N
- Rainfast in 1 to 2 hours.

Small Grain Crops Demand Attention

DEL VOIGHT
Agronomy Extension Agent
Lebanon County

The 1998 season has officially started with most producers awaiting soil conditions favoring field activities. One crop that demands attention is the small grain crops. This article will offer some suggestions on assessing stands, applying nitrogen and other important information related to small grains.

Winter wheat and winter barley will need a timely application of nitrogen to induce tillering by the plants. I checked a few fields and noticed that tillering has begun. In addition, populations look ideal forecasting a possible high yielding crop.

Producers can check their own fields by simply walking and pulling a few plants. First pull a few and determine the stage of growth. One should consult the "Penn State Agronomy Guide" for specifics on staging. The important point is to be able to identify when the plant tillers. This can be observed by pulling a plant and looking for a stem or stems emerging from the main plant crown. Once the plant begins to tiller an application of nitrogen will cause the plant to produce multiple tillers, further ensuring a 1.2-1.5 million plant stand and filling in where plants might have died over winter or been eaten by some animal or bird.

The next item while in the field one should note is population. To determine populations simply measure 1 foot in several areas and count the number of plants. Once you have a count for several areas average the count to get the average number of plants per foot. Wheat and barley require 19 plants per foot in 7-inch row spacing, 22 in 8-inch row spacing, and 27 in 10-inch row spacing.

Compare the results from the field with these figures and this will determine the urgency of getting nitrogen on the field or to abandon the stand. If the plants per foot are low @ 14 in 7-inch rows, then an application should be made immediately to stimulate tillering. One may also refer to the agronomy guide for more information on assessing plant stands.

Weeds are starting to grow and while producers are in the field they should check for emergence and presence of weeds. I observed many species of winter annuals such as chick weed, henbit, and pennycress present. Also, I observed bull thistle (biannual) in the rosette stage. One weed I was looking for was Canada thistle and I did not see any up out of the ground. This is important because if a producer decides to put a herbicide in with the nitrogen and apply it this early many weeds may not be present and emerge later and, hence, cause yield loss.

Since tillering lasts until growth stage three (three tillers formed), producers with little weed emergence at this time may choose to wait a couple of weeks before applying nitrogen and herbicide as a tank mix.

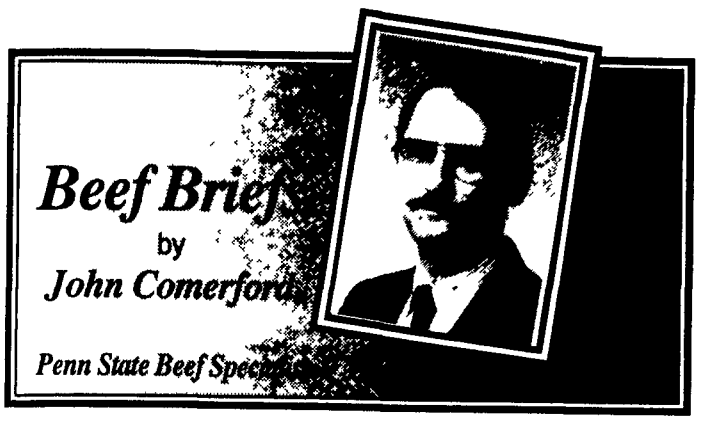
Besides the timing of nitrogen on wheat and barley the amount is critical. Too much and the crop could lodge, too little and yield will suffer. Penn State recommends the following nitrogen rates:

Small Grain	Manure history
	1-2 years	3-4 years	None
Wheat	0-30 lb/acre	30-60 lb/acre	60-90 lb/acre
Barley	0	0-30	30-40

If soybeans were grown last year and rotated to wheat crop producers need to account for the additional nitrogen supplied from the soybeans usually 1 pound per bushel of soybeans harvested the previous season. For example if 40 bushels were harvested last year and the required total nitrogen requirement for a wheat crop is 90 pounds then the total nitrogen needed to be top dressed would be 60 pounds (90-40). The source of nitrogen used will vary on the specific system the producer employs. Mixtures of liquid nitrogen 28-0-0 mixes with liquid ammonium sulfate 8-0-0-8 or a half and half mix of dry urea 46-0-0 and ammonium sulfate 21-0-0 has proved to enhance yields in wheat and barley. Local plant food suppliers are able to provide any mix producers request. Producers should work with local dealers to develop the proper mix and rate for the small grain fields.

Small grains are an excellent option for producers farming drought-prone soils. Yields of 90 bushels or more of wheat and barley or 6 tons per acre of silage may be obtained in rotation with soybeans to offset drought problems because of the likelihood of rains in the spring when small grains need moisture and soybeans which need rain in early fall when rains again become predictable. Those not currently raising small grains should consider this versatile crop.

High yielding small grains may be obtained by assessing stands and adjusting nitrogen application times to promote tillering, managing weed problems, and supplying just the right amount of nitrogen for expected yield, maintaining a 6.5 pH or better on soils, and monitoring disease potential in late spring. By following some simple principles, producers can maintain profitability in farming.



ADDING CLOVER TO GRASS

The performance of beef cattle on pure grass stands, especially fescue that may be infected with endophyte, can be greatly enhanced at a relatively low cost by the addition of clover to the pasture. In general, red clover will be the most desirable, but combinations of both red and white clovers can be used successfully.

The purpose of adding clover to existing grass stands is to improve performance of grazing cattle, reduce fertilizer costs, and improve reproductive performance of the breeding herd. Clover will increase the protein and, possibly, the energy value of a grass pasture. For these reasons, calves will have greater average daily gains and heavier weaning weights if the same pasture contained no clovers. This increase in performance was shown to be 50 pounds per calf in one study. Unlike cool-season grasses, clovers will still grow in mid-season, and will extend the availability of nutrients further in the grazing season.

Fertilizer costs can be reduced with the use of clover in the pasture because no nitrogen fertilizer is recommended if the pasture has at least 30 percent legume. Spring and summer yield of fescue/clover pastures have been shown to be as good or better than fescue pastures alone with 60 pounds of nitrogen added per acre. This savings can be as much as $20 per acre in fertilizer costs.

Like the advantage in calf performance, it has been shown that cows grazing grass/clover pastures will have enhanced reproductive performance compared to grass pastures alone. Again, this is due to both the greater protein content and extended availability of the legumes in the pasture. In addition, hay that is produced from these pastures will retain the higher nutritional value and contribute to cows achieving and maintaining better condition during winter months.

A recent Iowa State study has shown that body condition score and hay savings will be similar when bromegrass/clover pastures were compared with fescue/alfalfa pastures for winter grazing. In addition, both of these grass/legume combination pastures were superior to corn stalks and drylot hay feeding for maintaining body condition and reducing hay feeding.

Establishment of clovers in a grass stand can be accomplished in a number of ways. In general, six pounds of red clover seed and(or) 2-4 pounds of white clover seed that have been properly inoculated are needed per acre. The most successful renovation of grass pastures will be with no-till establishment of red clover. This includes planting in existing sods that have been "eaten down," or in small grains. Seeding clover with spring oats will work well, but, unless a grass/clover seed mix is used, the stand will be pure clover. For this method, twice as much clover seed should be used, and the oats should be grazed or taken for silage.

"Frost" seedings of clover in established sods in mid-winter requires good timing with the right conditions. This includes a soil that is "honeycombed" by frost, and seeding occurring before the soil becomes thawed. The pasture should not be grazed before reaching 8-10 inches in height in the spring, but it should be grazed completely to prevent shading of the clover plants.

Combinations of clover and grass seeds can also be used in a conventional tillage seeding. Fertility will be a key to successful establishment, so a soil test should dictate the fertilizer that may be needed at seeding.

Care must be taken that cattle grazing new seedings do not bloat. Limited grazing or use of poloxalene blocks can help prevent bloat in this case. In addition, it must be recalled that clovers are more suited to wetter, more acidic soils than alfalfa, but it will be shorter-lived in the pasture.

Call your local county agent or agronomy specialist about specific seeding recommendations for your locality.

Dairy Of Distinction Program Again Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey, will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from a roadside point of view. Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during your local June Dairy Month activities.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

For New York State applications are available from Carol Keene, RD 1, Box 31, Gilbertsville, NY 13776. Phone: (607) 783-2169.

For New Jersey applications, send to: August Knispel, 641 Sidney Road, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: (908) 735-4989.

All applications must be completed and returned to your state secretary by Wednesday, April 15, 1998.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from Penn State Cooperative Extensi.on.

Dairy of Distinction 1998 Pennsylvania Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and sumulate milk sales which encourages public support for the dairy industry The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead.

ELIGIBILITY

All Northeast dairy farms producing milk for sale are invited to submit an application for the award. Dairies receiving the 10 highest scores in each of the 21 districts will receive an 18" x 24" Dairy of Distinction sign to be displayed in front of their farm.

Dairy of Distinction

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance and other factors which can be controlled by the farmer Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane) Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy p oducts or dairy farming Farmers who apply for awards agree that, if selected they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to NEDFBP secretary by April 15

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1) The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee
2) The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground Top of the bracket shou'd be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3). Sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post and bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.
4). Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.
5). Replacement of damaged signs shall be the discretion of the committee.
6). No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expense
7) Judges' decisions will be final
8) Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st
9) Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign
10). Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee.
